COURT TO TEST FINANCING OF POWER PLANTS

Agrees To Review Utility Challenge of Holding Company Legislation.

FANS MUST REGISTER

Session Is Last for Justice Van Devanter as Tribunal Calls Summer Recess.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—The supreme court wound up an eight-month term today by agreeing to pass upon constitutionality of federal loans and grants to help finance municipal power projects.

It then adjourned, not to meet again until October. Before that time congress may act on President Roosevelt's controverted court reorganization proposal to put "new blood" on the highest bench.

Before adjourning, the court decided to review litigation filed by the Electric Bond & Share Co. and 20 subsidiaries challenging constitutionality of the 1935 act regulating public utility holding companies.

Required To Register

That left, in effect, a lower court ruling which required such companies to register with the securities commission, but did not involve constitutionality of the legislation. A review was sought without awaiting for a customary opinion by the circuit court of appeals.

This was the final session attended by 78-year-old Justice Willis Van Devanter, retiring after 26 years of service.

Among other actions, today, the court:

Refused to review a decision by the sixth circuit court of appeals ordering a trial before the eastern Tennessee federal district court to determine whether the Tennessee valley authority could expand its power program in eight states.

Declined to pass on two new cases challenging the Wagner labor relations act on the ground that it made no provision for a judicial review of decisions by the national labor relations board as to who should represent employes in collective bargaining.

To Pass on Tax Case

Consented to review a ruling by the court of claims that Robert A. Taft of Cincinnati, son of the late William Howard Taft, could not collect $1.07 interest on a gold Liberty bond which had been called for redemption in advance of the maturity date.

Question the tribunal agreed to review will be argued next fall with a final decision a few weeks thereafter. The rulings of the lower courts remain in effect on cases in which a review was denied.

Most Important Court Decisions

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—Decisions by the supreme court this session considered most important by constitutional experts follow:

1. Upheld the Wagner labor relations act, guaranteeing collective bargaining to workmen, as applied to three manufacturing concerns, the Associated Press and an interstate bus company.

2. Sustained the old age pension and unemployment insurance provisions of the social security act. The tribunal asserted congress could spend money to promote the general welfare, unless the proposed activities were clearly unreasonable.

3. Ruled that a state could fix minimum wages for women. The decision, sustaining a Washington state law, reversed a number of previous decisions. This was not administration legislation but embodied Roosevelt principles.

Justice Cardozo led this 5 colleagues in voting on the side of the administration—22 times for it and

REPUBLIC STEEL DEFIES PICKETS

Declares Thousands Still Working Will Not Be "Let Down" Due to Strikers.

CANTON WORKER INJURED

Suffers Possible Skull Fracture in Apparent Attempt To Go Through Lines.

By The Associated Press

YOUNGSTOWN, O., June 1—A triumvirate of steelmakers locked in a bitter strike war with the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee, saw one of their number move relentlessly forward today to defy a "strike or starve" blockade thrown up by miles of picket lines in the six-day-old dispute.

Republic Steel Corp., second largest of the nation's independent producers claiming thousands of men were still working in its plants, announced:

"We are not going to let them down now."

Republic's uncompromising statement, denouncing the picketing as "a military invasion," came as civil authorities in Chicago, Youngstown and Warren kept close watch on a tense situation and conferred with steel and union executives on plans to prevent disorders.

Canton Also Tense

Tenseness also prevailed at Canton, O., where Carl Fane, 23, suffered a possible skull fracture early today, when he apparently attempted to go through picket lines around Republic's alloy division, the only one of the concern's eight units operating there.

Police records showed he was taken to a hospital from union headquarters. His condition was reported fairly good.

Sunday's bloody rioting near Republic's south Chicago plant, costing five lives and leaving scores injured, brought a conference in Chicago between Gov. Henry Horner of Illinois and representatives of the steel forces. It ended with no evidence that a settlement was in the making.

Lewis, who placed at six the dead in the Sunday riot at Chicago, said the killing took place on the open prairie, six blocks from the gate of the sacred property of the Republic Steel Co. Not a single policeman was shot. Those who were injured suffered from the naked hands of men who were fighting for their lives against armed killers."

Sixty-seven men were held by Chicago police, investigators sought to fix responsibility for the Memorial day riot.

Police Capt. Thomas Kilroy said the 67 participated in the bloody

TAX LOOPHOLES NEED PLUGGING, SAYS PRESIDENT

Message to Congress Cites Varied Means Used To Evade Levy Laws.

DECLARES POOR MUST PAY

Claims Methods Used To Avoid Payments Demand Immediate Action.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—President Roosevelt asked congress today to stop tax dodging "by a minority of very rich individuals."

The chief executive, in a message saying evasion by the wealthy shifts the tax load to those less able to pay, urged legislation at this session "specifically and exclusively aimed at making the present tax structure evasion-proof."

"We face a challenge to the power of the government to collect, uniformally, fairly and without discrimination, taxes based on statutes adopted by congress," he said.

Mr. Roosevelt declared the full power of the government would be thrown behind a treasury investigation of income tax evasion and avoidance. He asked authorization to expand the inquiry, giving the treasury full power to summon witnesses and compel testimony.

Reports on Investigation

The President transmitted a preliminary report on the investigation, and expressed confidence congress would share with him a feeling of indignation at findings of evasion.

The report, he said, "reveals efforts at avoidance and evasion of tax liability, so widespread and so amazing in their boldness and their ingenuity, that further action without delay seems imperative.

There are a variety of tax dodging methods, Mr. Roosevelt added, explaining:

"Some are instances of avoidance which appear to have the color of legality; others are on the borderline of legality; others are plainly contrary even to the letter of the law.

"All are alike in that they represent a determined effort on the part of those who use them to dodge the payment of taxes which congress based on ability to pay.

Less Able Must Pay

"All are alike in that failure to pay results in shifting the tax load to the shoulders of others less able to pay, and in mulcting the treasury of the government's just due."

"All are alike in that they are definitely contrary to the spirit of the law."

Mr. Roosevelt included a letter from Secretary Morgenthau declaring eight devices are being used by wealthy individuals to escape income taxation. These ranged, he said, from the transfer of assets to personal holding companies in foreign countries to making artificial tax reductions for interest payments and losses.

Besides shutting these loopholes, Morgenthau asserted, congress should raise legislative barriers against three tax practices which specially are authorized in the law but which he said permit individuals and corporation to escape their fair share of the tax burden. He said these practices were deductions by oil and mining companies for the depletion of wells or mines; the splitting of income between husbands and wives in some states to take advantage of lower tax brackets, and the payment of only a 10 per cent tax by non-resident aliens on income from this country.

Cites Instances

Outlining instances of moral fraud uncovered in the treasury investigation so far, Morgenthau recited case after case in which he

BRITAIN URGES RESTRAINT IN EUROPEAN WAR CRISIS

Marion Youth Killed in Car-Motorcycle Crash

Robert Ingmier, 18, Dies and Wilfred Thompson, 20, Is Injured in Traffic Collision Near Waverly; Pair Were on Holiday Visit.

Robert Ingmier, 18, 343 Nye street was killed and Wilfred Thompson, 20, of 311 Nye street was injured early Sunday when their motorcycle collided head-on with an automobile near Waverly in the southern part of the state. The young men were returning to Marion after visiting with Thompson's relatives in McDermott, west of Portsmouth.

Ingmier, a hostler at the Marion Steam Shovel Co., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Roy Ingmier. He was one of the eight children.

Thompson, who is recovering at Schierman hospital in Portsmouth, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Thompson and was employed with his father in the contracting business. At first physicians believed he might have a fractured skull, but relatives said yesterday he is suffering from a minor concussion of the brain and is expected to be returned to Marion within a week or two.

Ingmier Driving Machine

The Accident occurred on Route 23 near Sargent, 10 miles south of Waverly, with Ingmier driving his motorcycle north. Thompson was riding on the rear seat. In an automobile traveling south was Russel Shoman, 21, his wife, Lucile, 23; their eight-months-old daughter, Irene; Carl Barcus, 22, and Mildred Grubaugh, 21, all of Mt. Vernon. All were slightly injured as the car crashed head-on into the motorcycle.

Ingmier's brother, Elmer Ingmier of 788 Bennett street, said he was informed by a representative of the Gregg funeral home at Waverly that his brother's body, Thompson and the demolished motorcycle were found after the collision on the right side of the road. The motorcycle was lying headed north, he said. The Gregg ambulance was the first to arrive on the scene of the accident, the brother said. Ingmier's body was taken to the Gregg funeral home and was removed to the Boyd funeral home at Marion at 10 o'clock Sunday night.

The brother said he will go to the scene of the accident to make an investigation to determine on which side of the road the accident occurred.

Mrs. Shoman told state highway patrolmen that as the motorcycle approached from the opposite direction, Ingmier turned his head apparently to speak to Thompson and that the motorcycle swerved directly into the path of the automobile.

The two young men left Marion Saturday night, relatives said, for a holiday trip on Ingmier's motorcycle which he purchased only a few weeks ago. They visited the home of Roy Newman at McDermott, a relative of Thompson, then started back home.

Relatives said Miss Gertrude Ingmier, a sister of the accident victim, had planned to ride from Columbus to Marion Sunday with her brother on the motorcycle. She is a student in Bliss college and was formerly a waitress in a Marion restaurant.

Ingmier is survived by his parents; four sisters, Gertrude, Ethel and Ruth at home and Mrs. Frieda Short of 494 Evans road; and three brothers, Elmer of 778 Bennett street, LeRoy of 326 Waterloo street and Harry of 766 Jackson street. He was born in June, 3, 1918, and had spent all his life in Marion. He was not married. Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Wednesday at the Boyd funeral home with H. E. Harriett of Mansfield officiating. Burial will be in Mecker cemetery. The body is at the funeral home.

SEVEN INJURED IN AUTO CRASH

Collision Occurs Six Miles North of Mt. Gilead as Cars Pass on Hill.

Seven persons were injured and two automobiles demolished in a three-car collision on state route 42, six miles north of Mt. Gilead last night about 11:45 o'clock.

Four Lorain men and three youths from Columbus, Ind., suffered injuries as the result of the collision, which highway patrolmen said was caused when one driver attempted to pass another car at the crest of the hill.

The injured are William Creegar, 24, bruises, lacerated left arm which required 25 stitches to close and cuts on face and head; his father, Jesse Creegar, 42, lacerated forehead; Paul Creegar, 20's brother of William, scalp laceration and Ray Burros, 28, a half-brother, cuts on face and arms; all of Lorain, Richard Malloy, 19, Harold Schaffstall, 17, and Taylor Heffer, 26, all of Columbus, Ind. They were picked up by a passing motorist and highway patrolmen were told they were taken to a Mansfield hospital. A check of the hospitals there today revealed that no accident cases were admitted last night. It is thought they were taken to a physician's office. Lorain residents were taken to a Mt. Gilead physician's office.

NAZIS DECLARE AFFAIR CLOSED

Keep Eye Peeled at Valencia To Meet Spaniards' Next Move In Hostilities.

WAR FLEET REINFORCED

Ordered To Open Fire on Spanish Planes at First Sign of Attack.

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 1—The German government marked the bombardment of Almeria as a closed incident today but turned a wary eye on Valencia to meet the Spanish government's next move in the tense crisis caused by the outbreak of hostilities between the armed forces of the two powers.

Reinforcements were ordered to the German battle fleet in Spanish waters which yesterday partly destroyed the Mediterranean port of Almeria. The ships were commanded to open fire on Spanish warplanes and warships at the first sign of attack.

The bombardment in which 20 persons were reported killed was announced by the government to be retaliation for the bombing of the pride of the German navy, the cruiser Deutschland.

23 Sailors Killed

Twenty-five German sailors were killed in the bombing of the ship which was a part of the international patrol to prevent the spread of the Spanish civil war by curbing the flow of arms and men to the warring factions.

Almost immediately after he had exacted Germany's revenge, Chancellor Hitler withdrew Germany from the 27-nation "hands off Spain" committee and demanded guarantees for the safety of German warships as a condition to re-entering the control setup.

The attack and counter-attack caused neutral foreign observers to feel concern lest the Deutschland incident and the Almeria sequel bring further consequences.

(Some London sources even expressed the fear the Valencia government might declare formal war against Germany.)

Official sources, however, emphasized that the incident was closed and said Germany does not consider that a state of war exists with the Valencia government.

Crowd Watches Chancellery

Throughout most of the night an anxious crowd huddled under umbrellas and gazed through a drizzling rain at the windows of the chancellery, the official resident of Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler.

There were no cheers. They just stood and waited. Many of those in the crowd were German mothers who had kept their places throughout the day. From time to time one could be heard to whisper to another:

"Has it come again? Have we raised our boys just in time for another war?"

Tax Collection Opens Today On Official Date

The June collection of real estate taxes opened this morning in the office of County Treasurer Homer D. Cole—on June 1 for the first time in years. Usually the collection does not get under way for several weeks after the official starting date, he said.

First to pay his taxes was John Wolfe of Morral, who was closely followed by G. O. Young of Agosta. No closing date has been fixed.

Collections for June last year approximated $493,000 and county officials expect the figure to be surpassed this year.

The collection was started early this year in an attempt to follow official starting dates in the future.

FIVE CASES BEFORE GRAND JURY TODAY

The Marion county grand jury convened today at the courthouse for the May session to consider charges against five persons. Prosecuting Attorney Paul D. Tomorrow the jurors will visit the jail for inspection.

A trace of rain late in the afternoon helped drop temperatures. A low of 67 was recorded last night, Dr. E. H. Raffensperger, government weather observer, reported.

A year ago, the mercury ranged between a high of 86 and a low of 61.

Fair and slightly cooler weather is forecast for tonight, to be followed by fair weather Wednesday.

PEACE APPEAL VOICED BY HULL

Statement to Spanish and Nazi Envoys Reflects Concern at Washington.

HANDS-OFF POLICY KEPT

Spanish Ambassador Brands Attack on Const Town Violation of Laws.

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—Secretary Hull has conveyed informally to German Ambassador Hans Dieckhoff and Spanish Ambassador Fernando de los Rios his personal hope that their governments may find some way to adjust peacefully the recent incident over the bombing of Almeria.

The secretary of state summoned the German envoy yesterday afternoon, it was learned today in authoritative quarters, to give him this message, reflecting the serious concern of the United States government over the possible effects of the attack on the Spanish loyalist port by German warships.

Cites Hands Off Stand

Hull directed Dieckhoff's attention to the fixed policy of this government to pursue its own separate and independent course with respect to the Spanish civil conflict.

This course has been marked by an American attitude of strict non-intervention.

Hull's unusual action mirrored the anxiety felt by high officials here over the international crisis precipitated by the Almeria bombardment. [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Church Shakeup Suggested by Presbyterians

Amendment Offered in Columbus Would Deprive Many of Voice in Affairs.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., June 1 — A "shakeup" in the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. which would deprive hundreds of ministers of a voice in its government was proposed today in a constitutional amendment referred to the church's 276 presbyteries for consideration.

Sent down by vote of the church's general assembly, or national legislature, the proposal would allow only those ministers actively engaged as pastors or church executives to participate in the church government beyond their local congregations.

Those disqualified could not vote in a presbytery (district governing body), could not be elected delegates to a synodical (state) conference, and could not serve as commissioners in the assembly.

Of the approximately 9,000 clergymen in the church, about 6,000 are pastors regularly assigned to churches.

The change was recommended by the assembly's special commission of nine. After the 1935 assembly has canvassed the presbyteries' opinion, it may submit the amendment formally to them for ratification. Approval by a simple majority would be necessary to make it effective.

Dr. Henry S. Brown of Chicago, chairman of the commission, said the amendment should help eliminate much of the trouble in the presbyteries.

"In studying the presbyteries," he informed the assembly, "we found that much of the trouble was due to the fact that ministers, young and old, who were not in the service of our Presbyterian church at all—indeed some of them were in the employ of organizations ignorant of or not ganizations ignorant of or not tagonistic to our church — that these men were likely to be present in presbyteries, voting and determining policies and programs to be handed down to active pastors and laborers in our church and which the pastors must carry out and the consequences of whose mistakes they—the active pastors —must suffer."

The assembly also referred to the presbyteries for consideration overtures proposing compulsory retirement of pastors at the age of 70 on pensions and urging the churches to restore salaries of pastors which were reduced in the depression.

Retirement of church board officials and other executives at the age of 70 already is required, and pastors voluntarily may retire at the age of 65.

The religious program of Adolf Hitler drew the assembly's fire.

The commissioners concurred in an action of the German Evangelical church refusing to recognize anything but "the one and only word of God" as God's revelation.

Tax Evasion Means Listed

WASHINGTON, June 1 — President Roosevelt's message detailing examples of tax evasion raised today in Capitol conversation the question—who are those charged by the treasury with evasion?

The message mentioned no names but listed the following instances, which give a comprehensive description of some asserted evaders:

1. "One American citizen with a $3,000,000 Bahamas corporation has apparently attempted to prevent the bureau of internal revenue from catching up with him by filing his individual tax returns in successive years from towns in New Brunswick, British Columbia and Jamaica."

2. "Perhaps the most flagrant case of this character is that of a retired American army officer with a large income from valuable American securities which he desires to sell at a very large profit. To escape our income and inheritance tax laws he used the device of becoming a naturalized Canadian citizen, and six days later organized for Bahamas corporations to hold his securities."

3. "Two New York insurance agents have caused the organization of insurance companies in the Bahamas with a view to enabling taxpayers to secure spurious deductions for interest through an ingenious scheme for the issuance of life insurance policies."

4. "One man's yacht is owned by his personal holding company, along with $3,000,000 in securities. He rents the yacht from his company for a sum far less than the cost of the upkeep, and the company uses its income from the securities to pay the wages of the captain and crew, the expenses of operating the yacht and an annual depreciation allowance."

5. "One wealthy man has placed his $5,000,000 city residence in such a corporation; another his racing stable, whose losses last year were nearly $200,000."

6. "One wealthy woman has improved on the general plan of evasion by causing her personal holding company, which owns her country place, to employ her husband at a salary to manage it. She can thereby supply him with pocket money, and in effect claim a tax deduction for the expense of maintaining him."

7. "One thrifty taxpayer has formed 64 trusts for the benefit of four members of his immediate family, and thereby claims to have saved them over $450,000 in one year in taxes."

ROOSEVELT WANTS TAX LEAKS PLUGGED

said rich individuals had cheated the government out of taxes.

He said preliminary inquiry started after March income tax collections dropped 17 per cent below estimates.

The treasury chief requested an appropriation to intensify and enlarge the probe, saying this expenditure would be recovered many times over. If tax evasion and avoidance are stamped out promptly, he continued, the treasury will recover "a very large portion" of the revenue deficiency.

The March deficiency was $140,000,000 under estimates. Mr. Roosevelt has estimated it will be $767,000,000 for the full fiscal year ending June 30.

The President urged congress to continue its tax legislating to plugging loopholes in present laws, reiterating an earlier suggestion that there be no new taxes and no general rate revision at this session.

He said the treasury would supply by next November a general tax survey, on the basis of which "the congress may, if it chooses, undertake revisions of the tax structure."

Evasion Separate Problem

"The long-term problem of tax policy is wholly separate from the immediate problem of glaring evasion and avoidance of existing law," he continued.

"In this immediate problem the decency of American morals is involved.

"The example of successful tax dodging by a minority of very rich individuals breeds efforts by other people to dodge other laws as well as tax laws."

The President said efforts already are being made to befog the tax evasion issue, adding:

"Already certain newspaper publishers are seeking to make it appear—first, that if an individual can devise unanticipated methods to avoid taxes he is doing nothing unpatriotic or unethical; and, second, that because certain individuals do not approve of high income tax brackets, or the undistributed earnings tax, or the capital gains tax, the first duty of the congress should be the repeal or reduction of those taxes.

"In other words, not one but many red herrings are in preparation."

OHIO'S GOLFERS TAKE TO FIELDS

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., June 1—Ohio's golfing brigade—115 strong—took to the fairways today at Cleveland Manakiki and Cincinnati Losantiville for 36-hole medal play tests which will send a dozen of the state's maulie swingers into the national open title fight at Birmingham, Mich., June 10-12.

Three other Ohioans, Ray Mangrum of Dayton and Billy Burke and Frank Moore of Cleveland, were assured of places in the open without firing a shot, that trio having finished among the first 30 in last year's classic at Baltusrol.

SEVEN ARE INJURED AS AUTOS COLLIDE

Marion sub-station, were called to the accident scene. They reported that the car driven by Malloy, headed south on route 42, was apparently passing an automobile driven by B. D. Freedman, 22, of Dayton, which was also southbound, when Malloy's automobile sideswiped the northbound car driven by William Creegar.

Freedman, who was accompanied by one other person whose name was not learned, escaped injury. His car was damaged to the extent of about $50. The Creegar car after being sideswiped continued along the highway for about 200 yards before running into a ditch. Both Creegar's automobile and the car driven by Malloy were demolished, patrolmen said.

While patrolmen were handling traffic at the scene of the collision, a minor accident occurred, resulting in the arrest of two California men. The men, brothers, were driving alone in separate automobiles. When the one, Phillip Henderson, 43, stopped at the scene the car driven by his brother, Clifford Henderson, 45, ran into the back of the first.

Patrolmen cited Clifford Henderson for reckless driving and his brother for operating a motor vehicle with improper license plates. The men, who gave their address as Brentwood Heights, Calif., said they were en route to the air show at the Great Lakes Exposition in Cleveland. Both pleaded guilty at arraignments before Justice of Peace J. F. Bennett at Mt. Gilead and were fined $10 and costs.

The Inquiring Reporter Asks Marion Housewives About Their Gas Refrigerators

Note:—Recently The Gas Company's Inquiring Reporter visited a few of the many housewives in the city who enjoy Servel Electrolux gas refrigeration in their homes. They were most enthusiastic in answering the following question:

THE QUESTION—

"What features of your SERVEL ELECTROLUX Gas Refrigerator do you like most?"

Mrs. Homer T. Little, 027 N. Main St.—

"Our Electrolux has been in constant use for four years and the operating cost has never exceeded fifty cents a month. Besides doing all the things all other types of refrigeration can do, it runs without noise and we consider it the best refrigerator sold. I would recommend it to anyone. I also like the feature of never needing any repair."

Mrs. I. H. Eckels, 297 Uncapher Ave.—

"I own two types of refrigeration in my place of business and I like the Electrolux best in many ways. It is silent, operates so cheaply and I know it will give us faithful, long-life operation. It is the finest refrigerator I have ever owned and that is why I choose Electrolux for both my home and my business."

Mrs. Lulu L. Spain, 236 W. Pleasant Ave.—

"I received my Electrolux for Christmas last year and am very much satisfied with it in every respect. We had used Electrolux refrigeration previously and believed it to be one of the finest because it is silent and operates for about one-fourth the cost of another refrigerator we used. I can depend on it implicitly for perfect preservation of foods and quick freezing of ice cubes."

Mrs. E. N. Snyder, 477 E. Center Ave.—

"We are using our Electrolux in our restaurant and it gets exceptionally hard use, but has given us perfect service in every way. I am quite sure that it has not cost us over 60c a month to operate. Also the fact that it absolutely makes no noise and has never required any servicing is so important to us that we would never be satisfied with any other refrigerator."

Mrs. Walter Mathiot, 822 Bexley Ave.—

"I have owned an Electrolux for three years and I especially like its low operating cost. Since we have had a gas refrigerator our gas bill is only slightly higher. I doubt whether it costs as much as you say in your ads. I have several friends who have gas refrigerators and they, too, like its silence and they know that it will continue to function as economically for years to come."

said rich individuals had cheated the government out of taxes.

He said preliminary inquiry started after March income tax collections dropped 17 per cent below estimates.

The treasury chief requested an appropriation to intensify and enlarge the probe, saying this expenditure would be recovered many times over. If tax evasion and avoidance are stamped out promptly, he continued, the treasury will recover "a very large portion" of the revenue deficiency.

The March deficiency was $140,000,000 under estimates. Mr. Roosevelt has estimated it will be $267,000,000 for the full fiscal year ending June 30.

The President urged congress to confine its tax legislating to plugging loopholes in present laws, reiterating an earlier suggestion that there be no new taxes and no general rate revision at this session.

He said the treasury would supply by next November a general tax survey, on the basis of which "the congress may, if it chooses, undertake revisions of the tax structure."

Evasion Separate Problem

"The long-term problem of tax policy is wholly separate from the immediate problem of glaring evasion and avoidance of existing laws," he continued.

"In this immediate problem the decency of American morals is involved.

"The example of successful tax dodging by a minority of very rich individuals breeds efforts by other people to dodge other laws as well as tax laws."

The President said efforts already are being made to befog the tax evasion issue, adding:

"Already, certain newspaper publishers are seeking to make it appear—first, that if an individual can devise unanticipated methods to avoid taxes he is doing nothing unpatriotic or unethical; and, second, that because certain individuals do not approve of high income tax brackets, or the undistributed earnings tax, or the capital gains tax, the first duty of the congress should be the repeal or reduction of these taxes.

"In other words, not one but many red herrings are in preparation."

OHIO'S GOLFERS TAKE TO FIELDS

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., June 1—Ohio's golfing brigade—115 strong—took to the fairways today at Cleveland Manakiki and Cincinnati Losantiville for 36-hole medal play tests which will send a dozen of the state's mashie swingers into the national open title fight at Birmingham, Mich., June 10-12.

Three other Ohioans, Ray Mangrum of Dayton and Billy Burke and Frank Moore of Cleveland, were assured of places in the open without firing a shot, that trio having finished among the first 30 in last year's classic at Baltusrol.

Taxicabs have been invented with sliding panels in their roofs to virtually convert them into open cars.

Church Shakeup Suggested by Presbyterians

Amendment Offered in Columbus Would Deprive Many of Voice in Affairs.

By The Associated Press.

COLUMBUS, O., June 1 — A "shakeup" in the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. which would deprive hundreds of ministers of a voice in its government was proposed today in a constitutional amendment referred to the church's 276 presbyteries for consideration.

Sent down by vote of the church's general assembly, or national legislature, the proposal would allow only those ministers actively engaged as pastors of church executives to participate in the church government beyond their local congregations.

Those disqualified would not vote in a presbytery (district governing body), could not be elected delegates to a synodical (state) conference, and could not serve as commissioners in the assembly.

Of the approximately 8,000 clergymen in the church, about 6,000 are pastors regularly assigned to churches.

The change was recommended by the assembly's special commission of nine. After the 1935 assembly has canvassed the presbyteries' opinion, it may submit the amendment formally to them for ratification. Approval by a simple majority would be necessary to make it effective.

Dr. Henry S. Brown of Chicago, chairman of the commission, said the amendment should help eliminate much of the trouble in the presbyteries.

"In studying the presbyteries," he informed the assembly, "we found that much of the trouble was due to the fact that ministers, young and old, who were not in the service of our Presbyterian church at all—indeed some of them were in the employ of organizations ignorant or or not ganizations ignorant of or not tagonistic to our church — that these men were likely to be present in presbyteries, voting and determining policies and programs to be handed down to active pastors and laborers in our church and which the pastors must carry out and the consequences of whose mistakes they—the active pastors—must suffer."

The assembly also referred to the presbyteries for consideration overtures proposing compulsory retirement of pastors at the age of 70 on pensions and urging the churches to restore salaries of pastors which were reduced in the depression.

Retirement of church board officials and other executives at the age of 70 already is required, and pastors voluntarily may retire at the age of 65.

The religious program of Adolf Hitler drew the assembly's fire.

The commissioners concurred in an action of the German Evangelical church refusing to recognize anything but "the one and only word of God" as God's revelation.

Tax Evasion Means Listed

WASHINGTON, June 1 — President Roosevelt's message detailing examples of tax evasion raised today in Capitol conversation the question—who are those charged by the treasury with evasion?

The message mentioned no names but listed the following instances, which give a comprehensive description of some asserted evaders:

1. "One American citizen with a $3,000,000 Bahamas corporation has apparently attempted to prevent the bureau of internal revenue from catching up with him by filing his individual tax returns in successive years from towns in New Brunswick, British Columbia and Jamaica.

2. "Perhaps the most flagrant case of this character is that of a retired American army officer with a large income from valuable American securities which he desires to sell at a very large profit. To escape our income and inheritance tax laws he used the device of becoming a naturalized Canadian citizen, and six days later organized for Bahamas corporations to hold his securities."

3. "Two New York insurance agents have caused the organization of insurance companies in the Bahamas with a view to enabling taxpayers to secure spurious deductions for interest through an ingenious scheme for the issuance of life insurance policies."

4. "One man's yacht is owned by his personal holding company, along with $3,000,000 in securities. He rents the yacht from his company for a sum far less than the cost of the upkeep, and the company uses its income from the securities to pay the wages of the captain and crew, the expenses of operating the yacht and an annual depreciation allowance."

5. "One wealthy man has placed his $5,000,000 city residence in such a corporation; another his racing stable whose losses last year were nearly $200,000."

6. "One wealthy woman has improved on the general plan of evasion by causing her personal holding company, which owns her country place, to employ her husband at a salary to manage it. She can thereby supply him with pocket money, and in effect claim a tax deduction for the expense of maintaining him."

7. "One thrifty taxpayer has formed 64 trusts for the benefit of four members of his immediate family, and thereby claims to have saved them over $450,000 in one year in taxes."

The Inquiring Reporter Asks Marion Housewives About Their Gas Refrigerators

Note:—Recently The Gas Company's Inquiring Reporter visited a few of the many housewives in the city who enjoy Servel Electrolux gas refrigeration in their homes. They were most enthusiastic in answering the following question:

THE QUESTION—

"What features of your SERVEL ELECTROLUX Gas Refrigerator do you like most?"

Mrs. I. H. Eckels, 297 Uncapher Ave.—

"I own two types of refrigeration in my place of business and I like the Electrolux best in many ways. It is silent, operates so cheaply and I know it will give us faithful, long-life operation. It is the finest refrigerator I have ever owned and that is why I choose Electrolux for both my home and my business."

Mrs. E. N. Snyder, 477 E. Center Ave.—

"We are using our Electrolux in our restaurant and it gets exceptionally hard use, but has given us perfect service in every way. I am quite sure that it has not cost us over 50c a month to operate. Also the fact that it absolutely makes no noise and has never required any servicing is so important to us that we would never be satisfied with any other refrigerator."

Mrs. Walter Mathiot, 822 Bexley Ave.—

"I have owned an Electrolux for three years and I especially like its low operating cost. Since we have had a gas refrigerator our gas bill is only slightly higher. I doubt whether it costs as much as you say in your ads. I have several friends who have gas refrigerators and they, too, like its silence and they know that it will continue to function as economically for years to come."

Mrs. Homer T. Little, 627 N. Main St.—

"Our Electrolux has been in constant use for four years and the operating cost has never exceeded fifty cents a month. Besides doing all the things all other types of refrigeration can do, it runs without noise and we consider it the best refrigerator sold. I would recommend it to anyone. I also like the feature of never needing any repair."

Mrs. Lulu L. Spain, 236 W. Pleasant Ave.—

"I received my Electrolux for Christmas last year and am very much satisfied with it in every respect. We had used Electrolux refrigeration previously and believed it to be one of the finest because it is silent and operates for about one-fourth the cost of another refrigerator we used. I can depend on it implicitly for perfect preservation of foods and quick freezing of ice cubes."

Biting and Chewing

Open ing hearings on changes proposed in the social security act this week will help to shed light on a dark subject

It continues to be true that the act is so vast and has been discussed so widely that there is only scanty knowledge of its provisions

This much is known however The social security act is the biggest project of its kind ever undertaken It is an attempt to do in the space of a few years what other governments will are striving to do after decades of experience

Some provisions of the act such as the reserve fund which it sets up are obviously faulty There is much to be done before this piece of new deal legislation can be tightened up and put into satisfactory shape

Yet encouraged by the supreme court's decisions upholding the right of congress to provide pensions for the aged and unemployment insurance for the jobless some now are demanding immediate enlargement of the scope of the social security principles to take in all the millions not covered by its provisions at present

The motive is good no doubt Even so perhaps this is a time to remember an admonition which frequently is directed against the strongest and worthiest of motives Never bite off more than you can chew

The Season Opens

The end of May is the official beginning of porch sitting season which deserves special mention That even fact the season always is ushered in by hardy persons who get out their porch furniture as early as the middle of the month shows how important porch sitting can be

Its chief merit no doubt is the wide variety of contacts it provides The world goes by the porch sitter remains by the side of the road and watches it. Friends stop to talk a minute Pedestrians pass the time of day Some one comes to visit next door The family across the street seems to have a new radio It's too bad the baby cries so much That girl down the street either is going with a new boy friend or the old one has a new car Twenty three automobiles have gone past the house in the last five minutes announces grandmother It's time now to turn off the lawn sprinkler and some one should make another pitcher of lemonade If the porch only had screens it would be a grand place to stay all night so cool and breezy Shhh whom coming up the walk?

Yes there's a lot of merit in porch sitting which begins off cloth Memorial day week end and continues as long as the weather and the porch furniture hold out

Good For Four Years

It is interesting to notice in connection with Stanley Baldwin's retirement that the British have had only nine changes of government and 11 prime ministers since 1895 Mr Baldwin's successor Neville Chamberlain is the 12th prime minister but he will bring nothing new to British policy

In the United States in the have been seven presidents since 1897 each with a different cabinet Thus there is more similarity in the political temper of the two countries than is realized

But there is one sharp difference In Great Britain if a prime minister met as hostile a reception to a measure as President Roosevelt has received for his supreme court proposal he would be forced to resign There might follow thereupon a general election which would determine how the country felt about the issue

Furthermore in Great Britain if a prime minister cannot get his party's sanction for an idea he must abandon it Party discipline is stronger but it works both ways—on leaders as well as on the rank and file

These things are pointed out to show that under the British system Mr Roosevelt's court proposal would have been the cause of a cabinet collapse an expulsion from the party and probably a general election Under the American system which makes the presidency good for four years no matter what happens it will threaten to split a party and affect the congressional elections of 1938

Effect of The New Wage Bill

BY DAVID LAWRENCE

Copyright 1937 by The Marion Star

WASHINGTON June 1—Every man and woman who works for a living will be affected in some way if the proposed wage control bill is adopted by congress and enacted into law

Only a handful out of the 45,000,000 persons gainfully employed will ever see or read the 10,000-word bill which seals their fate as workers in America and probably only a small number of legislators will ever read it either

It therefore becomes a public duty to tell what the unprecedented bill contains and what extraordinary power over the life of the citizen will be assumed by the federal government in the event the bill should become law

In the first place the bill empowers the commission of five who are to administer the proposed law to include in its scope whatever classifications it may desire As finally introduced in congress the bill does not say whether employers of less than 50 or less than 8 will be covered by the measure but leaves this to be determined in the future presumably by congress but with broad powers to the commission to make changes

It is for this reason difficult to say how many workers will be affected by the minimum wage provisions because so many industries already have what is conceded to be the minimum that probably will be adopted namely around $15 a week and many industries likewise have a work week of 40 hours or less

The measure however is not merely a means of controlling minimum wages and maximum hours It is broad enough so that with slight changes the whole subject of wage control can be covered If put into law the Corcoran bill—so named after its author Tommy Corcoran of the brain trust—will really put all employers and employes under such rigid government regulation as to working conditions and possible compensation that wage scales as a whole are bound to be affected as well as the cost of living for those who have to purchase the products in which price increases will inevitably result from the government's system of wage control

Makes Unions Unnecessary

The Corcoran bill would really make labor unions superfluous After recalling its provisions one wonders what there is left for a labor union to do and just why any worker should bother to pay dues when all the functions of wage regulation will be supervised by the federal government through the wage control board

Likewise there will be little use for state governments when this bill is enacted Their powers over local industry and wages and hours will continue insofar as they may seek to improve the minimum wage or decrease the maximum work week But the federal power assumed is of such a broad nature that if goods produced inside a state happen to compete with goods outside of a state which have conformed to the federal standards the wage and hour board can issue an order preventing the first from shipping his goods into interstate commerce or from shipping it to his customers who may have planned to ship it into interstate commerce

The discretionary powers vested in the federal wage and hour board are incredibly far reaching Take the following paragraph as an example

Having regard to the policy of the congress to extend the applicability of the provisions of this act with respect to an oppressive work week to all employments within the scope of this act as rapidly as possible the board shall from time to time by regulation or order declare such provisions applicable to employments within the scope of this act as rapidly as the board finds that such provisions can be made applicable to such employments without unreasonably curtailing the earning power of the employe in such employments"

Not Content With Usual

Not content with the usual grasp of the whole lawmaking function the Corcoran bill goes on to vest discretion of even wider scope as follows

Having due regard to the minimum wage standard established the board shall by regulation or by order vary such standard upward or downward as to all employees or as to any class or classes of employees to the extent that the board finds a variation necessary or appropriate to prevent the depression of general wage levels below those consistent with the maintenance of a minimum wage standard of living necessary for health and efficiency without unreasonably curtailing opportunities for employment"

Contradictory In Nature

There's enough in these paragraphs of a contradictory character to make the provision seem unworkable because it is next to impossible to determine some of the broad questions specified but the board nevertheless could issue its orders right and left and cut through the whole structure of business and industry as we know it — an service businesses and professions because the Corcoran bill provides that

Any person who willfully performs or aids or abets in the performance of any act declared to be unlawful by any provision of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction shall be fined not more than $500 or imprisoned for not more than six months or both Where the employment of any employe in violation of any provision of this act or of a labor standard order is unlawful each employe so employed in violation of such provision shall constitute a separate offense

So it doesn't matter what experimenting the federal wage and hour board may do if any of its multifarious orders or rules are violated the employer may go to jail He can go to jail too for failing to keep records required by this act or any regulation or order thereunder and it doesn't matter whether he has been paying the minimum wage or keeping the work week at the right maximum hour the records of his business must at all times be conducted according to the way the federal wage and hour board says they must be kept and he must make available at all times to government agents all payrolls and data of every kind relating to employment

Then too the federal wage and hour board is to have power to define and delimit employments in which persons are deemed to be employed in an executive administrative supervisory or professional capacity or in agricultural laborers

If all this seems complex and excessively governmental the reader will find that the Corcoran bill omits nothing that anybody could possibly think of to include Thus it says

For the purpose of regulations and orders the board may classify persons and matters within its jurisdiction and prescribe different requirements for different classes of persons or matters

Evidently Tommy Corcoran didn't miss a thing but the prize sentence in the bill reads as follows

The singular includes the plural and the plural includes the singular

Since President Roosevelt has endorsed the bill and demanded its passage at this session every citizen who hasn't an opportunity to read the bill for himself might of course insist that his representative or senator at least take the trouble to read the document before voting on it surely not an unreasonable request with respect to a measure which like fascist Italy and fascist Germany puts the power over wages and hours and working conditions into the hands of the executive who controls the commission of five to be appointed to execute the bill if enacted into law

Congress Regains Its Voice

BY PAUL MALLON

WASHINGTON June 1 — The long period of Mr Roosevelt's complete dominance over congress is breaking up so quietly now as to be almost invisible to the naked eye

The changing situation at the top of the government is being handled so smoothly as to conceal the real force of its vital effect

Take the relief compromise now being widely advertised as having been effected between the house majority and the White House To the casual it sounds like a minor concession of an insignificant point but it actually represent the first time the President has ever bowed to the lower branch of the legislature

Cancels

At the same time the sit backs to the President's court packing program in the senate are being handled so casually that the outside world is not yet aware that the legislation has already been defeated This also marks the first time the President has failed to have his way with the upper but not necessarily loftier branch of congress

What it means as all legislative students know is that the rule of thumb appears to be just about over When legislators once find out there is no bogeyman they rarely forget it

A period of more normal relations between the capitol and the White House seems to be in prospect with both sides taking and giving as the Constitution decreed they should

Neither

The smoothness with which the relief compromise negotiations were handled is due largely to House Floor Leader Rayburn His associate leaders thought he made a mistake when he faced the house with an appeal for delaying the fight until today They told him so outside They judged the mood of their rebels to be implacable and suggested he would only be sticking his nose out for the blow if he tried to handle them

Mr Rayburn thought he would get licked anyway and might as well take it while trying rather than running

This is the first opportunity he has had to show leadership since the session began Nothing but his pacific personality put it over More and more of that quality will be needed from now on

State Tariffs

The good neighbor policy seems to be working all right into nationally More accurate way to describe it might be that it is not working to any appreciable extent and therefore is developing in Mr Roosevelt's own department building which may cause the landlord to try a good neighbor policy on the state tenants at home

The 21st amendment is doing it. That prohibition repealer provided that states which desire to remain dry may act to do so The supreme court recently held in a case from California that this permits a state to regulate or restrict importations from another state I permitted tariff barriers between states

No doubt the founding fathers turned face down in their graves when they heard about the California decision which requires all sorts of non-California beer to pay $7.00 for a license while sellers of California made beer pay only $50 If there was one thing the fathers slipping their Madeira in Philadelphia wanted to prevent it was discriminatory tax or tariff legislation between states

Missouri Rules

Now comes Missouri with a law prohibiting the importation of alcoholic beverages from any state which has enacted a resolution discriminating against the sale of Missouri made beer (meaning of course California and aiming of course at California's wine industry) Other importation control bills have been introduced in dozens of other states and the situation is well on the road to chaos

Ballyhoo

The treasury campaign to beat hidden tax dollars out of the cocoanut rich probably will not net a cent a word That is more attention will be produced than money No one expects to balance the budget thereby

These campaigns against rich tax evaders are really perpetual The higher the taxes go the more ingenuity is displayed in evading them Current punitive share the wealth tax rates have unquestionably inspired the imagination of some taxpayers to the limit and beyond it The government itself is not blameless as it recently adopted an untried system of corporate taxation in place of an efficient and old method built up by twenty years of application

If the government gets half of its advertised hope of $100 000 000 in revenue out of the drive most experts will be agreeably surprised Such tax policing usually costs much and brings in comparatively little

While this necessary policing goes on all the time authorities generally advertise their efforts widely at various times for political and other purposes It is always popular to soak the rich

What It Means

President's Economy Move

BY MORGAN M BEATTY

Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON June 1—President Roosevelt's demand for federal economy and the echoing fanfare in congress is merely the latest ingredient in a new bottle of economic medicine

And it is not the strongest stuff in the bottle either

The whole concoction is simply a flimflam preparative to keep American business from getting the jitters after four years of stimulating tonic

The tonic was prescribed in 1933 by the President and his advisers with the aid of J Maynard Keynes the British economic doctor

That formula decreed the patient needed a pump stimulant The tonic he got was a mixture of federal borrowing and spending for the simple purpose of getting plenty of money into the hands of the buying public

The fact is federal borrowing and spending is a form of inflation Every borrowed federal dollar has a germ of 1933 money in it because it is based not upon a gold standard but upon government credit Morgan Beatty And wild money can always start a runaway boom in prices just like the boom of 1929 Everybody knows what happened after that in 1929 The boom burst

So when the President put his spending policy in effect he knew he was going to have to cook up something later to soothe business nerves after he got the ball rolling

Apparently the rise in prices early this year gave him the cue that the time has come to administer the sedative so he started mixing the medicine early in March

Four Points of Action

Here's what happened

1—Late in this month and again early in May the federal reserve board ordered member banks to increase their reserves thus bottling up close to five billion dollars and holding it out of the nation's money stream Thus there's less money to work with now

2—Attorney General Homer Cummings started suing the Aluminum Company of America under the anti trust laws This was supposed to slow up too rapid a price expansion in many lines just like a cop arresting one speeder will slow down other drivers who see that unpleasant little drama of the highway

3—The President warned the public and government employes to stay out of the stock market unless they are buying for investment The theory is that every dollar bid to speculate in stocks drives values abnormally high as it does after the manner of 1929

4—Not content to stop there the President wrote a letter to Vice President John Garner opposing legislation that would put a federal blessing on state laws fixing prices on trade marked goods Such laws he said would tend to raise price levels and provide an undue hazard to the average householder (Since then prices have been declining)

Crossed Signals

Then came the bitter pill—that is bitter stuff for politicians who have to run for congress next year

The President broke the sad news that treasury experts got their signals crossed and overestimated tax receipts for the fiscal years 1937 and 1938 Instead of a balanced budget next year he said there will be a half billion dollar deficit The 1937 deficit will cross the two billion and a half dollar mark regardless of what is done

I regard it as extremely important that we should achieve a balance of actual income and outgo for the fiscal year 1938 he said

One reason is that more government deficit means adding to the $33 000 000 000 national debt That means more federal borrowing again more pump priming more money in circulation and simply means further price inflation

Taking Dose in Advance

For instance more money means more pennies in people's pockets to cover the price of a loaf of bread and bread will naturally command a higher price and so on until the vicious circle is repeated Therefore every one of the five moves made by the administration on the economic front since the Eccles statement of March 25—a statement from Marriner S Eccles the federal reserve board chairman urging a balanced budget—has been aimed to prevent a runaway boom and of course the resulting slump

In other words the administration is taking its financial headache medicine in advance This and the financial pages will tell whether the medicine was needed and if it was whether it cured the ailment

Some Memories of The NRA

Recalled by Roosevelt's Wage Hour Proposal

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON June 1 — The depression-born NRA experiment being under congressional fire far different from those stirring days when President Roosevelt made his move to fix minimum wages and maximum hours for industry

The national recovery act dealing with wages and hours was primarily a reemployment measure

When the President asked congress in early 1933 the peak of business had been weekly scores of major industries were operating at a loss New thousands had joined the unemployed

NRA was an emergency measure but Mr Roosevelt indicated even then that it soon expected eventually development of a permanent government program respecting wages and hours

Signing on June 16 1933 the NRA bill which he described as the most important and prompt measure of its kind in history the President said

The law I have just signed is passed to put people back to work to let them buy more of the products of farms and factories and start our business systems running again This task is not one of months—first to get many hundreds of thousands of the unemployed back on the pay roll by snowballing and second to plan for a greater future for the longer pull

Its Cornerstone

Self government by industry through adoption of codes of fair practices but with safeguards and veto power was the cornerstone of the NRA

I envisioned organization of each major business into a code authority or business guilds each code to prescribe fair competitive practices and minimum wages and maximum hours for workers The President was empowered

MURDER ON THE BLUFF

By Esther Tyler

(Copyright, 1937, Esther Tyler)

SYNOPSIS: The mysterious shooting to death of Jude Billings, old flame of Opera Cook, week-end guest of Farrington, starts a series of strange attacks and finds the body of Michael's aunt, Miss Judith, below the bluff. Aunt Judith is shot in the shoulder and manages to crawl to the death with the powders. The Skipper, Farrington's tweedy younger aunt, Kitty Cook, gets "doped" to disappear, and we find proof that the chauffeur is an ex-convict. Mike and Gay Palmer, arrive with Aunt Martha to find Cook searching alone and Mike in the Skipper's room.

CHAPTER THIRTY-NINE

The Letters Vanish

IN the darkness I struggled to my feet, listening to rapid feet crossing through the bathroom from Michael's room. I was dazed, but I didn't care. Rocking back and forth on my knees, I waited for the light to come through the door and disclose the face of Cook. I almost thought I could see it in front of me—see the light.

The door came open with a jerk. Michael stood on the threshold, a heavy silver box raised above his head as a weapon. At the sight of him his mouth dropped open, fascinated. I swung my head down in the path of light coming through the bathroom door. They encountered an ordinary pair of eyes, one end of which had been kicked up in the air—in all probability by my own foot. The other end was held firmly to the floor by a leg of the Skipper's bed. Of bodies—or traces of them—there was not a sign.

"What are you doing now?" said Michael blankly.

I was becoming aware of a throbbing head and a barked shin, and I was also conscious of the blood I had shed there on my hands and knees.

"Playing pussy!" I said. "Any objections?"

He stepped over to a stand and switched on a light.

"Are you hurt?" he inquired without too much interest.

I got clumsily to my feet. "I'll survive."

Michael surveyed me thoughtfully. "Suppose we go into the other room," he said.

I went. The indignity of my position momentarily seemed more important to me than the mysterious disappearance of Cook. M. Farrington was sitting in a chair, clad in one of her eternal lavender wrappers, sharp eyes on my face. Gay sprawled on the bed cocked up on one elbow, her attitude ironically alert.

I addressed myself to Gay, the least disconcerting of my audience. "Where's Annie?" I said.

But M. Farrington was not to be denied. "Annie," she declaimed, "is still looking for the glasses which we left over there on the dressing table. Would you mind telling us what you were doing?"

"Someone got to William's room before I did," I said, not pausing to ask whether or not they had told her the whole story. But M. Farrington had been missing no tricks.

"How do you know? Were the letters gone?"

The letters! "No," I said quickly. "Mike has them, haven't you Mike?"

Michael's hands flew to his pockets and on through his vest and trouser pockets.

"Gay has them," he said.

Three pairs of eyes swung to Gay's face. It was blank.

"But I haven't. You have them yourself, Mike. You took them from Jimmie's."

There was silence.

"Michael," said M. Farrington crisply, "search the hall. You may have dropped them in your excitement."

It was a forlorn hope, but it was the only one. Mike went on the errand. M. Farrington took command of the situation.

"Now, James, you have not explained what you were doing in Barbara's room. Don't look so vague."

I tried to do as I was told. As calmly as I could, I told her what I had discovered. Gay gasped once and, when I came to the episode of the rug, giggled nervously. But M. Farrington's gimlet eyes never left my face.

"Why didn't you go down to the kitchen?" she snapped before I had drawn a breath on my last period.

"I couldn't hear her. You can always hear Cook, and—"

"Humph!" said M. Farrington cryptically, just as Mike came through the door.

His face told the story long before his tongue could.

"Didn't find a thing."

"I guess it's time we looked at that kitchen," I said.

M. Farrington's smile was sardonic. "Are you quite sure, James?"

I was sure.

The smaller corridor was still in semi-darkness. I listened outside of Higgins' door for the faint sound of his breathing. Cook's door was still closed, but I was taking no chances. I pushed it open and satisfied myself that she had not returned to her room. Then, feeling my way carefully, I started down the back stairs.

The mumble of voices was lower and more indistinct. I could no longer distinguish one from the other, let alone any of the words. Slowly I crept down until the turn of the landing brought me within full view of the kitchen, where I halted, open-mouthed.

William stood at the end of the kitchen table, leaning over talking excitedly to Annie, who was sitting beside him. Beyond them in a capacious rocking chair, her eyes glittering and her large hands clenched tightly in her lap, sat Cook. She was not talking, but she was listening spellbound to the other two.

"Is it proof enough?" I was obliged to exert every ounce of balance I could command to avoid falling over the banisters in my eagerness to hear Annie's whisper. "If we was to fall through with this, he could make it awful hot for us. There ain't many jobs, Bill. You'd oughta know that."

William brought his fist down on the table expressively but without sound. "The guys like us is the ones that'll get blamed. It took me three years to learn that. And here's another thing. We got enough evidence on Higgins to send him to the chair tomorrow!"

"You're in a Tight Spot"

At this moment I leaned too heavily upon the railing. It wasn't a very loud squeak, but William spun around. I tried to flatten myself against the wall, but I had been discovered.

I stuck my hands into my pockets and ambled down the stairs.

"What I'd like to know, William," I said, "is what you just said. Something about evidence against Higgins, wasn't it?"

With a ridiculous pretense of calm, I seated myself on the table, my back to the massive figure of Cook. "If you'll take my tip, William, you'll get the whole story off your chest. What do you know about Higgins?"

He was gripping the table as if he meant to smash it to pieces.

"What makes you think I know anything?" he said.

"You do." I strove to keep my voice level. "You're full of surprises. What, for example, do you know about Higgins that would send him to the chair?"

I pitied the fellow. His eyes were bloodshot and his face was drawn. "You can't prove I said nothing. You can't prove nothing. I ain't going to talk."

I took a long shot in the dark. "As a matter of fact, William," I said, "I can prove several interesting things about you. And it so happens that my evidence is very fine evidence indeed. And it won't do you any good to dispose of me in order to get hold of it."

Cook, I really believe, would have throttled me at that point, if William's arm had not sent her hurtling back into her chair. He drew a long breath.

"All right," he said faintly. "What are you going to do?"

I shoved a chair at him with my foot. "Sit down," I said, "and tell me about it. It's all bound to come out anyway."

He sat heavily. Annie was beginning to cry.

"I been three years in the pen." His voice was slow and dazed. "I was driving for the Bilnshops and a ring was pinched. They pinned it on me. The old man felt sorry for me and got me a job here with Miss Barbara. I ain't done a thing—but it's gonna look bad." He was mumbling as if in his sleep, and his voice was weary, hopeless and sick.

"Did anyone but Miss Barbara know about this—anyone in the house, I mean?"

He shook his head drearily. "Miss Judith knew."

Jude! It was going to look bad! And yet, if the Skipper had known all about his record, he would have had no reason for—I leaned toward him.

"You know better than I do that you're in a tight spot. Your only way out is to find the guilty man."

Cook's roar this time brought me to my feet.

"Damn you!" she bellowed. "Damn you for a lying devil! Leave him alone!"

"Suppose you finish the story, William," I said.

His blazing eyes snapped from Cook's face to mine. For an instant I thought I would be obliged to fight my way out, but only for an instant. William's eyes fell, and he sank back into his chair.

I lost my temper. "This won't get you anywhere—where are the letters?"

"How did you manage to get here, William? Did Cook arrange it?"

"No. I told you once, Mr. Bilnshop did. Cook's been here a long time. She got Annie this job when they sent me up. And then—I just happened to get here. I might have known there'd be some hitch to a break like that!"

"Did anyone here know that you were related?"

William shook his head. "I didn't want to take no chances."

Every word he uttered dovetailed with a wild idea forming in the back of my mind. Right then, it seemed too bizarre to be true, but I was to think better of it.

"What did you do with those letters?" I said.

"What letters?" His face was bewildered.

"Don't be a fool," I snapped. "We searched your room just now and found the letters from your warden and from Mr. Bilnshop. A few minutes later, when we came back, the letters were gone. What did you do with them?"

William's face was twisted in terror.

"As God's my judge, Mr. Wells," he said, "I didn't have no such letters."

I lost my temper. "You had them or some one in your family did. I saw them. This won't get you anywhere. The first policeman who comes into this house can have you identified. Where are they?"

"Do you know what he's talking about?" William turned dazedly from Cook to Annie. They both shook frightened heads. "What—what was in them, sir? Where was they?"

"They were in your driving cushion," I said. Slowly, as accurately as I could, I repeated their contents. Before I was halfway through, my bewilderment redoubled. As surely as I was sitting there, not one of the three had ever heard my words before. It was insane and pointless. They had absolutely nothing to gain by denials. William evoked the conclusion that was formulating in my own mind.

"It's—Crazy!"

"Somebody put 'em there! Put 'em there and then swiped 'em."

"Did you ever have such letters?" I demanded.

His eyes clouded. "I don't know. I had references from the warden and Bilnshop once, but I forget what I done with them. I—think—I showed 'em to Miss Barbara when I got this job and then chucked 'em. It's crazy."

It was all of that. I turned to Cook.

"How long have you been down here?" I inquired.

"Huh?" Cook's heavy jaw dropped and then snapped together. "In this kitchen? I come down with Willie to fix him some supper."

"Has she been here ever since?" I directed the question at William. His face darkened. "Sure, she's been here. What do you think? You needn't try to pin anything on her, too."

"I'm not trying to pin anything on anybody," I said patiently. "I'm trying to find out what happened. Two people are dead, and if we don't want to be in their shoes, we've got to find out what happened. We won't find out anything until everybody tells all he or she knows."

I paused to gauge the effects of my words. It was considerable.

"Now," I said quietly, "did either of you straighten up William's room after we searched it a few minutes ago? No one can hold it against you if you did. It will just keep up from running up any more blind alleys."

"No," said William earnestly, "I swear I didn't!"

Annie's negative was thin and wavery but Cook's came forth torrentially.

"Very well, Cook," I said curtly. "Annie, did you leave Miss Farrington alone—even for a second—after William came downstairs?"

Annie answered without the slightest hesitation. "No, sir. Not for a second even!"

Only Higgins Could

One point was settled then. Almost anyone in the house might have placed those letters in William's room, but there was only one person who could have removed them—Higgins. Everyone else was carefully checked. Unless the Skipper was in the house! Or either Gay or Michael was withholding them for a purpose. The only purpose that I could imagine for such an act was to conceal the fact that either had put them there.

I picked my words slowly. It was important that William should tell me all he knew about Higgins without being frightened into withholding any information. I wanted to know what he had been on the verge of telling the others when my blundering entrance into the kitchen cut him short. I had constantly in mind the fact that either William was a felon or William had served three years in jail rather than give information about someone else.

"We're all in the same boat," I said. "Either we catch the culprit red-handed or one of us is apt to become this third victim. And another one of us is pretty certain to be tried for these killings." I didn't point out which one of us. I left that to William's imagination and he got the point. His hands clenched convulsively. "What have you people noticed about Higgins?" I inquired as casually as I could. "To my mind he is the only person who has had access to William's room recently."

In the heavy silence it seemed as if my attempt had failed. Just as I was about to try again, William spoke.

"He's been funny," he said. "Long before you and Mr. Michael came he was funny—jumpy. Used to go roaming around the house at night and nearly went crazy if you caught him at it or asked him a question." William paused uncertainly.

"That wouldn't hang a man very high."

"Maybe not. That first night—the night you folks got here—he acted almost nuts. Had Cook in such a fuss about the dinner, it's a wonder you got anything to eat at all. Laid me out in fine style for not bringing him some stuff from the drug store, when I'd already told him I couldn't get it unless Miss Judith's train was late. Made me go all the way back to town after it."

"And then, when Annie and Cook was both downstairs, I heard him talking in his room. Thinks I, The old boy's gone screwy. So I knock at his door. And was he wild! Told me he was reading poetry out loud and I'd better mind my own business if I didn't want to start looking for a job. Threatened to knock me down. Can you tie that?"

The net of evidence closes in on Higgins, tomorrow.

SOME HIGH SPOTS IN HISTORY OF NRA

license industry to force compliance, but never used this power.

To this gigantic organization took the President called Hugh S. Johnson, 325-pound retired brigadier-general.

There followed one of the most amazing chapters in the history of American government and industry.

Johnson launched into his job with an energy that left younger associates gasping. He worked 15 18, 20 hours a day. Sometimes he didn't have time to shave or sleep.

The first code, that for the cotton textile industry, was signed July 9, less than a month after enactment of NRA. Johnson—no detail was too small for his personal attention—drove his organization to feverish activity through long hours of the hot Washington summer.

Deluge of Publicity

A gigantic publicity machine cranked out stores of press announcements, telling the story of the blue eagle, selling the public on support only for industries which carried this label of the NRA.

Business men flocked to Washington, joined in the movement with something of the patriotic fervor of war time. Hundreds of thousands signed voluntary presidential reemployment agreements for a 40-hour week, collective bargaining, minimum wages and a child labor ban before the codes for their industries were drawn.

NRA's organization grew—2,000, 3,000 employes, finally more than 4,000—overflowed all available space. Important conferences were carried on in every cubby-hole for lack of other meeting places.

In this whirl that revolved about Johnson, was a small, dark-eyed woman, his secretary, "Robbie," (Miss Frances Robinson) who became like her boss a national figure.

She worked the same killing hours, dashed about the country by airplane with him, cooked his favorite dishes in a little kitchenette of his office.

But despite the crusading atmosphere of those early days Johnson realized that criticism was sure to follow and expressed this opinion in his own colorful language.

He said his job was like mousling a guillotine on a bet the ax would not work and he predicted "the early applause will cease and soon the air will be full of dead cats."

BERLIN SAYS VATICAN STRAINS RELATIONS

Deplores Pope's Failure To "Disavow" Critical Speech of Cardinal Mundelein.

By The Associated Press

BERLIN, June 1—The German government today formally accused the Vatican of endangering normal relations with the Nazi reich by failing to "disavow" the critical speech of George, Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago.

A diplomatic note, handed to the Holy See by Diego Von Bergen, the German ambassador to the Vatican, said:

"The Holy See must realize that its unexpected and incomprehensible attitude in this matter, so long as it remains unremedied, has removed the pre-conditions for the normal course of relations between the German government and the Roman curia."

(The Roma curia is the body of congregations, tribunals and offices through which the Pope governs the church.)

The foreign office said the note did not mean that relations with the Vatican were now being broken off. Von Berg, it was explained, left Rome on his usual summer vation. But, it was stated, "he will not go back for some time."

Earlier the German government had made formal representations to the Vatican against Cardinal Mundelein's speech, in which he called Adolf Hitler "an Austrian paper hanger and a poor one, at that."

STEEL OPERATIONS CUT BY STRIKES

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, June 1—The sharpest decline in the nation's steel operations in many months was reported today by the American Iron & Steel Institute in wake of the tie-up of strike-bound plants of some independent producers in the Cleveland, Youngstown and Chicago districts. The operating rate this week, the institute estimated, will be 77.4 per cent of capacity compared with 91.0 per cent last week.

DUCE AND HITLER AID TO DISCUSS CRISIS

Both Fly to Rome for Conference Regarding Recent Spanish Developments.

By The Associated Press

ROME, June 1—Premier Benito Mussolini thundered back to Rome today at the controls of a tri-motored plane and arranged to discuss Italy's part in the grave Spanish situation with Marshal Werner von Blomberg, the German war minister.

Il Duce reached Littorio airfield in his plane after a flight from Rocca Delle Caminate, where he had been spending a holiday, and drove swiftly to Venezia palace. He will see von Blomberg who likewise arrived by plane, early tomorrow afternoon.

Fascist newspapers blazed with headlines on the Spanish government aerial attacks on German and Italian warships and the German reprisal shelling of Almeria. One newspaper, Il Piccolo, which is directed by the authoritative Virginia Guyda, even suggested a "punitive expedition" to "suppress" the Spanish government, but officials indicated such a plan was not being contemplated.

"If it were, one Fascist said, Italy would hardly announce it in advance."

CIO PROMISES TO AID UAW ORGANIZE FORD

Showdown Nears in Probe of Fist Fight at Gates of Rouge Plant.

By The Associated Press

DETROIT, June 1—Promised aid from the Committee for Industrial Organization figured today in the currently delayed drive of the United Automobile Workers of America to unionize the Ford Motor Co.

Homer Martin, union president, announced that John L. Lewis, CIO chieftain, had telegraphed him assurance of "every assistance" from the auto workers' parent body in the campaign.

The message reached Martin even as a showdown impended in the projected investigation of Wayne county authorities into last Wednesday's bloody fist fights in which union organizers were beaten off Ford property.

In the telegram Lewis branded the "attack by agents of the Ford company" as a "most flagrant outrage."

Prosecutor Duncan McCrea, threatening "further steps" unless his demands are met, had given the Ford company and Dearborn city officials until today to produce witnesses in the fight. Neither has indicated assent.

110 PURCHASE NEW FISHING LICENSES

Sale of 50-Cent Permit Starts In Clerk's Office.

Approximately 60 persons visited the office of Clerk of Courts Carl F. Haberman Saturday to obtain new 50-cent fishing licenses which are required for all types of fishing under a new state law which became effective Saturday midnight. Saturday's sales bring to 110 the licenses issued by the clerk since early last month.

Having only 40 licenses left, Mr. Haberman today was considering wiring to the state conservation department at Columbus for new supplies. Various sporting goods store and hardware stores in the county are also selling the new permits.

Sportsmen, estimated approximately 4,000, will be sold in the county eventually.

The new licenses are required for fishing with pole, rod and reel or with a plain string. They replace the old $1 licenses formerly required for rod and reel fishing.

Mounted on an armored tractor, giant shears have been invented to cut down trees almost two feet thick.

FINANCING OF POWER PLANTS FACES TEST

five times against it. All those five were unanimous decisions.

Justice McReynolds held top position in voting against administration litigation—20 times against and seven times for.

Project Financing To Be Reviewed

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 1 — The supreme court agreed today to review a ruling by the United States court of appeals for the District of Columbia refusing to enjoin the government from financing power plants from public works administration and emergency relief funds.

This means that arguments on the controversy will be heard by the court next October and a final decision delivered within a few weeks thereafter. The government had asked the court to refuse a review.

Secretary Ickes, the public works administrator, said such action would affect 54 public power projects, held up by litigation, for which the government had provided $51,000,000.

The litigation directly involved two utility concerns—the Alabama Power Co. and the Iowa City Light & Power Co. They sought to prevent the government from supplying money to Iowa City, Iowa, and six Alabama municipalities.

They contended that construction of competing municipal plants would drive the private utilities out of business and violated state rights.

In reply, the government said the supreme court decision upholding the social security legislation "makes it plain that expenditures for the relief of nationwide unemployment are a proper exercise of congressional power" to promote the general welfare.

It added that a refusal to review the controversy "will mean the prompt employment of many thousands of men" while granting of a review "will result in the denial for not less than four months of the opportunity to create such employment."

Utility Firm Loses Battle

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—The supreme court refused today to pass on litigation filed by the Electric Bond & Share Co. and 26 subsidiaries challenging constitutionality of the 1935 act regulating public utility holding companies.

The utility companies asked the high tribunal to review a decision by Judge Julian W. Mack of the New York federal district court requiring that they register with the securities and exchange commission and make reports of their financial condition and corporate structure.

They sought a ruling by the supreme court without waiting for the circuit court of appeals to pass on the litigation. Sometimes, in cases considered of great public interest, the supreme court permits that procedure.

Joining in the request for an immediate review to permit a final decison next fall, the securities and exchange commission told the court that if it declined to pass on the controversy now, "the government would not be able to undertake effective administration and enforcement of the act until the summer of 1938, nearly three years after its enactment."

This case had been picked by the government to test the validity of the holding company law.

TVA Expansion Test Approved

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, June 1—The government lost in the supreme court today in its effort to prevent a trial before the eastern Tennessee federal district court to determine whether the Tennessee valley authority could expand its power program in eight states.

The high tribunal refused to review a decision by the sixth circuit court of appeals ordering trial of litigation brought by the Tennessee Electric Power Co. and 15 other private utilities in an effort to curtail the TVA activities.

In taking that action the circuit court set aside an order by the district court temporarily halting the TVA from proceeding with new construction already under way.

By The Associated Press

MONTS, FRANCE, June 1—The wedding that will make American-born Wallis Warfield the Duchess of Windsor will take place Thursday at 11:30 a. m. (5:30 a. m. Marion time).

Herman L. Rogers, American spokesman of former King Edward VIII, announced the half-hour advance in time today.

AMELIA TAKES OFF ON WORLD FLIGHT

San Juan, Puerto Rico Her First Stop, Then Brazil and On to Africa.

By The Associated Press

MIAMI, Fla., June 1—Amelia Earhart took off for San Juan, Puerto Rico, today on a second attempt to fly around the world "just for fun."

The slim aviatrix waved a bare arm in farewell and then gunned the big twin-motored monoplane some 2,200 feet along the runway before she lifted it easily into the brilliant tropical dawn.

Just before the takeoff, her husband, George Palmer Putnam, leaned into the cockpit to kiss her goodby and shake hands with her navigator, Capt. Fred Noonan, who is to accompany her on the 28,000-mile west-to-east journey.

The blond aviatrix, in plaid shirt and tan slacks, exuded confidence and smiles but Putnam, after leaving her side, paced nervously back and forth along a balcony until her ship got off the field.

Putnam planned to remain in Miami until his wife reaches Natal, Brazil, her jumping-off place for Africa. A commercial airline will monitor her flight over its regular route to South America and expects to have reports on her progress.

Miss Earhart planned to cruise the 1,033 miles to San Juan at a leisurely 150 miles an hour to test her plane further and said she would return to Miami if anything went amiss.

George Belser Sr., 75, of Crestline, a former resident of Marion, died at 1 a. m. today at his home. He was born at Covington, O., Dec. 4, 1858, and prior to moving to Crestline about seven years ago, made his home in Marion. Covers were placed for more than 125 members and guests at the annual Palumni meeting of graduates of the Agosta High school Saturday night in the recreational room of the M. E. church. Mills of Marion, county school superintendent.

During a business session Ivan Everett of Agosta was elected president; Mrs. Fred Holverstott of Agosta, secretary, and Jack Corbin of that place, treasurer. Jail Is Lonely Place With Only Five Prisoners

Inmates at the Marion county jail this morning were virtually in solitary confinement as the population dropped to five, the lowest in the administration of sheriff Fred Miller. The previous low mark was set last year when six prisoners were held at the jail.

Where there are not as many to guard, the low number is not desirable in the eyes of the sheriff who must feed his wards under a limit of 25 cents a meal each. As the population drops, the cost of feeding each prisoner mounts, he explained.

If the expense goes above the 25 cent limit, the sheriff pays from his personal funds. The usual cost is between 13 and 20 cents, records show.

Possibility that the population may be reduced still more is seen in the fact that three of the five held in jail are awaiting action by the grand jury now in session. If no indictments are returned the three must be released at once.

Their first efforts were reported to be meeting with success with Germany favorable to a scheme for setting up guaranteed safety zones where patrolling foreign warships might go to rest their crews and to refuel.

London sources pointed out, however, that such an arrangement would be dependent on the belligerents in Spain and suggested that zones be described on the high seas if the Valencia government or the insurgents refused to cooperate.

There was also a possibility that Germany would insist that her demands for protection had not been met unless arrangements were made to ward off attack while on patrol duty.

New Hope Dawns

The German announcement that no further reprisals for the Deutschland bombing were intended, and the report from Paris that the reich approved the Franco-British safety zone plan brought fresh hope to the members of the 27-nation committee called into session today without Germany or Italy.

Circles in close touch with the committee said the argument of self-interest would be pressed to secure German and Italian return.

LICENSED TO WED AFTER DIVORCE

A few minutes after he was granted a divorce Saturday, Albert Forshey, moulder, of 245 Park boulevard, applied for and received a marriage license, according to records of common pleas and probate courts. The divorce was granted shortly before noon by Judge Hector S. Young on grounds of willful absence of the former wife, Mrs. Thelma Forshey. Lewis M. Francis was attorney for the husband.

The marriage license was granted a few minutes later to Forshey and Miss Ellen Burcker, clerk of Urbana, in probate court.

TOLL RANGES TO 200 IN ALMERIA ATTACK

order, said three American relief workers ewer among the wounded but they furnished no identification. The Spanish Credit Bank building, where the International Red Cross had offices, was among the commercial buildings caught in the pounding.

In residential quarters, the explosion of one projectile alone tumbled three and four of the small stone houses. An unexploded missile was picked up in the cellar of a hotel.

Most of Almeria's population, normally 36,000, was asleep yesterday when the German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer, and four destroyers hove to in battle formation about eight miles offshore and opened fire with 20-centimeter (7.87-inch) shells.

The city, peopled in part by refugees from Malaga which was captured by an insurgent army last February, stirred quickly out of its slumber. Thousands ducked to subterranean safety but others were caught by crumbling walls.

Ambulance sirens played a wailing accompaniment to the thunder of explosives. Telephone, electric, gas and water services were wrecked.

First aid clinics soon were jammed with the ambulances' loads. Many women and children were among the casualties. One injured woman delivered a child while she was being treated.

battle and said they will be charged with conspiracy to commit an illegal act, which carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $2,000 fine upon conviction.

Demands Contract

Van A. Bittner, regional director of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, said after attending the conference called by Gov. Horner that:

"This strike won't be settled until we get a contract. These conferences don't amount to a damn."

"The nation knows the Chicago police force is corrupt," Lewis said in his prepared statement. "It is the same force that for years has protected the hoodlum and the thug. It now aids the Republic Steel Co."

Gov. Martin L. Davey of Ohio could not be reached today, but his secretary said no date had been set for the conference with steel company and union representatives which he proposed last week.

Assurances were given that rules of peaceful picketing would not be broken and strike leaders promised to take steps to avoid another clash with police, Federal and state authorities attended.

Fight Resumed at Dusk

The Memorial day quiet along the strike front lasted scarcely four hours, from dawn to dark, before fresh skirmishing broke out around Republic's plant at Warren, O., where corporation airplanes have been skimming over the picket blockade to get provisions to beleaguered workers.

There was a clash of clubs and iron bars and three men were treated for head injuries after an estimated 300 loyal workers rushed from the mill and drove off about 40 pickets.

The sound of gun shots at Warren brought charges from Republic that "gunmen in the picket lines" were firing on food planes again. There were also reports of answering fire from within the plant grounds, stoutly denied by Republic. All obvious tenseness in the area made it one of the threatening spots along the wide front, with at least 75,000 workers idle.

Sheriff Ralph E. Eiser in Youngstown admitted the seriousness of the situation in an order banning the sale or giving away of beer or liquor.

UPPER SANDUSKY MOTORIST FINED

Kelly Asks Hank and Bill To Watch Over Children During Her Absence.

Bill and Hank did not hesitate about entering the [illegible] and kindly, but [illegible] which I had set for [illegible]

"Are you doing anything for vacation?" Bill de[illegible] Hank echoed the [illegible] guess you've [illegible] for us," Bill went on. "It's a pity if we couldn't [illegible] in some way. Just [illegible] you want done, and [illegible] right away."

"Well, [illegible] that." Hank sup[illegible] with a grin, and my [illegible] with the prospect of [illegible] the only fear I had in [illegible] leaving the camp [illegible] the children.

To Hank is the daredevil of the [illegible] who exploits and [illegible] Bill and Dorothy [illegible] themselves with [illegible] admiration. I should not [illegible] the desire of emu[illegible] the older boys is strong upon [illegible]

But I was not wholly upon the [illegible] of the younger boys that I [illegible] activities. I dread [illegible] petition to the camp, feel[illegible] to be "in pieces" in[illegible] a whole human being with [illegible] intact.

His Hands Full

"I'll get this," I said slowly. "You know Aunt Katherine has her hands full with Baby Faith [illegible] that all you boys are [illegible] Even with Williams [illegible] there are times when [illegible] Hank rather get out [illegible] I can."

"I'll get the world they do," Hank said. "These two lads need [illegible] troopers apiece some [illegible]"

"I'm glad you realize it," I coun[illegible] for that's the important [illegible] I want you to do while I'm [illegible] You can imagine what an [illegible] it would be for me if [illegible] accident should happen [illegible] of those boys while I'm [illegible] If you two can take over the [illegible] for them, I shall rest [illegible]

Both boyish faces were suddenly [illegible]

"That's a large order," Hank [illegible] but I guess we can handle [illegible]

What It Means

"You know what it means, don't you?" Bill said, looking fixedly at [illegible]

Hank squirmed a bit, but his answer was prompt.

"Sure thing, I know what it means," he retorted. "It means I've got to cut out my stunting, [illegible] fancy. Those two kids are just as they make 'em, Aunt Kelly, but such fools! They think you can do everything. Bill and I [illegible] since they're so many years [illegible] younger and not nearly as strong. And their muscles aren't trained, either."

"And you're giving up your stunts, Hank," so that the smaller boys won't imitate them," I exclaimed, with no less sincerity because the exclamation was part of my strategy.

Voices Admiration

"Oh, I do think that's splendid." I went on with voice crammed full of admiration. "You have made me very happy. I am sure nothing will happen to the children now that you two will care for them."

"We'll be on the job every minute," Bill promised. "But, Aunt Madge, will boys mind us? I don't mean that we want to be bossy or anything like that, but if we're out with them—"

He hesitated, and I finished his sentence for him.

"Your words is to be law," I said with grim decision. "And I'm sure you won't have any trouble with them. I'll talk things over with them before I leave."

Both boys heaved a sigh of relief, which seemed to come from their shoe soles.

"That makes everything perfect," they said. "If you just settle their hash before you go away, and leave your orders with them, we'll have no trouble at all. When do you want us to begin?"

"Right away, if you don't mind," I told them. "The boys are out on the lake now, rowing and fishing alone for the first time. Don't let them think you're watching them, but I'd feel lots easier about them if you two were out on the lake, too. Don't go too near them, and pretend to be fishing."

We don't need to pretend," Bill answered promptly, when I told them that I would feel easier about the two small boys, who were out on the lake for the first time, if he and Hank would go out in a boat near them and pretend they were fishing, so that the small boys should not suspect the espionage.

We'd planned to go fishing in a few minutes anyway," he went on. "The bass fought to be biting fine about now. We'll bring you a mess for supper, Aunt Madge."

"Bring me a perch and sunfish," I told them, voicing an old preference, and they smiled in superior fashion at my queer tastes in fish.

"Honestly, we won't forget and throw those back this time," they promised, and I smiled at their earnest faces as I rose and moved toward the door.

"See that you don't," I said. "And now I'm going over to see Aunt Katherine. Good hunting—or, rather, good fishing. Now—"

Katherine Startles Her

I threw up my hand to punctuate my paraphrase of Bagheera's salute, and the boys, who know their Jungle Stories backward, chuckled as I went out of the door. It was not alone the beauty surrounding me on every side which brought my spirits up as I walked through the sun-flecked path to the cabin where Katherine had established Faith's improvised nursery. It was the security I felt in the dependability of Dicky's two nephews.

But as I came to the veranda door of the nursery cabin I paused, aghast. Our beautiful baby daughter was asleep upon the couch hammock where Katherine places her for her daytime naps, but her devoted nurse was sitting beside it, her head buried in her arms and her body tensely quivering.

She was not weeping or sobbing. I was almost sorry that she was not. I could have dealt better with an orgy of emotion than I could with this tragic silence.

"Katherine, darling," I said softly, "May I come in?"

She lifted her head startled, and my heart cried out in pity at her ravaged face. But I said nothing, knowing that if Katherine wished to confide in me she would do so without persuasion.

Had to Let Go

"It's only the old story, dear," she said in a curiously flat voice. "I'm able to go on and do my stint most of the time. But once in a while it gets me. This is one of the times. Better let me go away and 'dree my weird' by myself."

For answer I drew a chair to her side. Lifting her head, I cradled it against my shoulder.

"You need a good cry as badly as anybody, I know," I said in matter-of-fact tones. "And I'm providing the shoulder. Go on, honey, cry it out. You've kept up so long and so bravely. I don't care how you do it, without breaking, so long as you're speaking only the truth."

Few women were faced with the peculiar and tragic problem confronting this winsome wife of my absent cousin. She it was who had nursed my children so faithfully, giving me the opportunity to write the plays which had been my ambition since early girlhood.

Her husband, whom she had loved devotedly, was staying in the jungle [illegible] of another continent, whether by his own volition or because he was ill she did not know. His neglect was so gross that she had not received a letter from him for an unbelievable time, but instead had been sent a crass epistle from a woman in the expedition asking Katherine to give [illegible] up to her.

This was one side of the picture.

The other showed the lover of her early years, Hal Meredith, parted from her by a malevolent fate, but forever free to claim her. During those years she had wooed her beautifully, tempestuously, persistently and hopelessly, until the crash of a plane in which he was flying to see her sent him, almost devoid of life, to a hospital. There, a miracle of surgery had saved him from death or serious maiming. Katherine, feeling that she was responsible for the plane flight, had gone to him—actuated by what, love or duty?

I never had been able to determine that for myself, and even as I held her quivering figure against me, I wondered if she, herself, knew the answer to the question.

FARMER HELD FOR WIFE'S DEATH PULLING PLOW

Charlie shows how he was hitched to plow

Death of his frail 54-year-old wife from overexertion after being forced to pull a plow over "new ground" on their farm near Woodbury, Tenn., resulted in arrest of John W. Davis, former murder. Authorities also charged Davis with having performed an illegal operation on his wife shortly after she and their son, Charlie, had been hitched to the "bull-tongue." Davis, shown in jail, admitted using his wife as a plow horse, but denied performing the operation. Charlie and two other Davis children are pictured demonstrating how he was forced to pull the plow.

John Huffman Wins Additional Fencing Honors

Son of Former Marion Teacher Takes National Title for Fifth Time.

A son of a former Marionite, Dr. John R. Huffman, has won additional renown in the field of fencing, according to an account of his achievements published in the May issue of "The Winged Foot," a monthly magazine edited by the New York Athletic club. PASSENGER TRAIN KILLS THREE HORSES

Special to The Star

DELAWARE, O., June 1—Three valuable registered Percheron horses owned by Ezra Pittman and Jacob Schlinger of near Leonardsburg were killed when they were struck by a northbound passenger train on the Big Four railroad Sunday night. The horses had escaped from a nearby pasture field. The train was delayed only a short time.

HANDS OFF EUROPE URGED AT BUCYRUS

Memorial Day Speaker Wants U. S. To Refrain from Dealing With Warring Nations.

Special to The Star

BUCYRUS, June 1—If war is to be averted, America must stay out of international affairs and refrain from dealing with warring nations and sailing ships in dangerous waters.

That was the remedy for peace prescribed Memorial day by Carl E. Smith, secretary of the Ohio parole board, in his Memorial day address at Oakwood cemetery.

"We must," he said, "take the profit out of war if we are to have no war. When the soldiers were receiving $30 a month serving their country millionaires were being made here overnight. Yet, every millionaire's mansion there are thousands of little white crosses in this and foreign lands."

Mr. Smith's address followed the Decoration day parade. The city's only two remaining Civil war veterans Frank R. Shunk and William Cosgrove, remained on the platform at Oakwood cemetery throughout the ceremonies.

GOOD SHOW VERDICT OF CIRCUS AUDIENCE

Wallace Bros. Troupe Plays Before Capacity Audience Here.

"A good little show"—that seemed to be the comment of most of the thousands of people of Marion and vicinity who attended the performances of the Wallace Brothers' circus here yesterday afternoon and night. The entertaining production, which was here only the single day, was Marion's first circus of the season.

Making no pretence of being mammoth, the show travels entirely by truck and trailer. While virtually every act was well done, the show seemed to excel in aerial and acrobatic entertainment. The audience enjoyed, perhaps more than anything else, the clowns burlesque of the coming wedding of the Duke of Windsor and Mrs. Wallis Warfield.

Instead of opening with a song by the entire company, the circus closed with it, contrary to the usual big-top procedure. The opening event was a parade of all the performers.

First came the acrobats and aerial artists who appeared from time to time afterwards. Also on the bill were excellent bareback riding exhibitions, slack and tight rope walkers. One of the wire experts slid down a sloping wire on his head from a high point.

One of the most amusing acts was given by six dancing elephants who did a parasol "shimmy" and even tried a square dance. The clowns were headed by Edward Raymond, European pantomimist.

Hoot Gibson, famous western movie star who was advertised as being with the circus, appeared for only a few minutes during the regular performance, confining the bulk of the activity to a show following. With him were several Indians and cowboy riders who enacted a history of the old west. A wrestling match was also scheduled for the evening show.

The circus arrived at the Arnshalt lot on North Prospect street early Sunday from Mansfield. While a good attendance was reported at the afternoon performance, the evening show saw a full house of approximately 1,500 persons.

1,500 Gather At Cemetery To Honor Soldier Dead

Dr Jesse Swank Speaks on New Patriotism Following Parade from Uptown District

Marion honored the memory of its soldier dead Sunday afternoon as patriotic and civic organizations paraded to the cemetery where nearly 1,500 persons attended impressive Memorial day services. The services were featured by an address by Rev. Jesse Swank, pastor of the Central M. E. church at Springfield, O., and wartime pastor of the Epworth M. E. church here.

While lauding what he described as the old patriotism which filled the hearts of soldiers of the Revolution and other American wars Dr. Swank declared that today a new patriotism is needed by the young people of the United States to keep the country off the road to ruin. The new type of patriotism would seek a broad international outlook and strive to solve the governmental and economic problems of the country.

Headed by Francis S. Layton of Marion as the commander of the G. A. R. the Memorial day observance got under way at 2 p. m. as the parade started from West Center and turned south on Main street toward the cemetery.

The Parade

The streets along the line of march were lined with thousands of spectators and the day was ideal. Hundreds of people sat in their automobiles parked along the line as the marchers passed by.

First in the parade were Fire Chief T. J. McFarland, Police Chief William F. Marks and Safety Director John V. Firth followed by the firemen and policemen. Veterans groups and auxiliaries, Boy and Girl Scouts, school children carrying flowers, the Harding High school band and the F. O. Eagles band. Co. D of the United States National Guard of Ohio, officers of the day, the Red Cross ambulance section and several automobiles carrying the Civil war veterans formed the parade.

Services were conducted in the memorial plot at the Marion cemetery and were opened by J. W. Llewellyn who introduced Commander Layton. Mr. Llewellyn served as vice president of the day in place of T. J. Andrews who was unable to be present because of the illness of Mrs. Andrews.

Commander Layton in a brief talk praised the manner in which the American people have remembered the Civil war veterans of which there are only 4,000 left in Ohio. Mr. Llewellyn then delivered a short address of the departed soldiers.

Following an overture by the band, Rev. Oscar V. Latta pronounced invocation and the Girl Scouts gave a duh sang two selections.

James I. Metz, a member of the general staff, read the order of Gen. John A. Logan on May 8 1868 creating Decoration day on behalf of the Civil war veterans. Robert Seiter of Marion, one of the state winners in the American Legion essay contest on the Constitution, read Lincoln's Gettysburg address. The audience then sang America as the school band played. Before the address by Dr. Swank the salute to the flag was given by the audience.

All the soldiers at the cemetery were heard through the air playing taps with speakers both at the Memorial plot and at various points on Delaware avenue near the cemetery for the convenience of persons unable to find places in the. Approximately 800 persons were assembled in front of the speakers stand.

Introduces Dr. Swank

Dr. Swank was introduced by Mr. Llewellyn who explained that since Memorial Day came on Sunday this year it was appropriate that a minister be selected. Dr. Swank was chosen in view of his years of service here partly during the World war.

Probably one of the most provocative Memorial Day addresses ever given here Dr. Swank described the sacrifices and work which our forefathers put in to the making of America and then bravely asked the audience "Is the United States worth it? Are all our blessings going to make us softer or weaker than our fathers?"

Directing his remarks to the young people he said that it is upon them the responsibility for the freedom of America rests. He said it is their fight however, hoodlers to stave off the effects of regimentation and dictatorial policy that has started the United States toward governmental tyranny.

The new patriotism demands that we shall fight against narrow and sectarian nationalism. It will demand as brave and gallant a fight as did the old patriotism did against tyranny.

"I believe in nationalism but not a narrow one. We want a great internationalism on which we can find a basis for a world wide understanding. It is a narrow patriotism that prays only for the United States and lets the rest of the world go as it may."

Dr. Swank declared that as a result of the World war we have a reaction back to old tyrannies and an intense nationalism. Nations glory in their supposed self sufficiency and will have nothing to do with their fellow countries he said.

Referring particularly to Russia he scorned the attitude of their leaders against God and the attitude of other dictatorial nations against the sanctity of treaties and pacts made in good faith.

He pointed out the adverse effects of dictatorship on the masses and said America is heading on that road.

They exalt state above god above manhood and womanhood. If Christianity is to be practiced by a people they will never submit to tyranny he said. Religion is against tyranny nations nationalism and the subservience of peoples to government.

Urges Arbitration

Launching into a discussion of the battle between labor and capital Dr. Swank urged peaceful arbitration instead of force. The new patriotism will demand a better economic and industrial system—but will achieve it through thinking of men he said. He asked the pertinent question.

If you destroy capitalism who is going to give the orders? In answer he declared that if the profit system is abolished by the labor the government will give the orders and tell the worker how he is to live.

He warned that if capital and labor do not get together to carefully Roosevelt or some president to follow will take the scepter and rule.

Another factor of the new patriotism is a larger cooperation racially and religiously Dr. Swank said. He urged people to overcome narrow prejudices and pointed out that race is not chosen but born.

He closed with a note of optimism saying there is still a chance to change the nation's way of thinking—its thoughts on government on labor and capital on race prejudice and religion. All wars have been fought in order to change a certain way of living and the war which America must fight today is to change the present trend of thought. He declared.

Rev. Latta pronounced benediction after which the spectators moved to the Legion memorial plot for closing services. The graves of World war veterans were decorated with rifle salute and taps sounded. The closing services were in charge of the 40 et 8 Voiture members.

The patriotic group gathered and Harris reformed their lines and marched north on Main street passed the post office where officers of the day reviewed the parade.

Your Health

BY DR. R. S. COPELAND

Treating Ulcers

I HAVE RECENTLY received a number of inquiries about the "injection treatment" for ulcer of the stomach—peptic ulcer, as the doctors call it. This form of treatment sometimes results in pronounced benefit. But it must not be regarded as a sure cure for every case of ulcer of the stomach.

Gastric ulcer or ulcer of the stomach is a common complaint. The number who suffer from this affliction is countless. Indeed it is a very common disturbance of middle life.

As a rule ulcer can be traced to faulty eating habits but it is sometimes due to infection, or follows some other disease. Diet, climate, race and general health are important factors in its development.

The ulcer may be located in one of several portions of the stomach or in the first part of the intestine. If it is in the stomach wall it is spoken of as a peptic ulcer. If it is located in the first portion of the intestine it is spoken of as a duodenal ulcer. The symptoms vary according to the location of the defect.

In the treatment I mentioned a certain substance is injected into the arms or buttocks of the patient. These treatments are given every day for about three weeks.

A study, of several thousands of cases treated in this manner shows it to be of value but only in a certain type of ulcer. It is not beneficial when the ulcer is extensive involving a large area. It is not advised if the inflammation and tissue destruction are so marked that rupture or perforation is liable to occur.

As a rule relief is observed after the fourth or fifth injection. The pain may completely disappear and such symptoms as nausea vomiting and gas formation are relieved. At the termination of the treatment if it is successful there is complete disappearance of all symptoms. Occasionally it may be advisable to receive a further course of treatment within six months to a year after the first course has been completed.

In the injection treatment the medication used has a soothing effect on the lining of the stomach. Of course no one should submit to any form of treatment unless careful investigation has been made. Naturally it can only be given by the physician.

Undoubtedly your doctor will have taken X-ray examination of the stomach. In this way he is able to locate the site of the ulcer and to determine what treatment will be most beneficial.

Rev. Olewiler Preaches Sermon for Pupils at Epworth M. E. Church.

The Bible as the answer "to the deepest problems of your lives" was held up as the world's greatest literature by Rev. Howard L. Olewiler of the First Presbyterian church in the annual commencement sermon service Sunday night at Epworth M. E. church.

A congregation of approximately 1,300 persons heard the sermon on "The Greatest Literature." In the group of seniors was the son of the speaker, Richard Olewiler.

Sunday morning congregations of the Trinity Baptist, Oakland Evangelical, First Reformed, Forest Lawn Presbyterian, First United Brethren and Emanuel Lutheran churches honored seniors who are members. Roses were presented the graduates at several of the churches.

Clad in gray caps and gowns, the seniors marched into the church to the music of "War March of the Priests," by Mendelssohn, played by Miss Maye Evangeline Lawrence, who had played a half-hour program of music while the congregation assembled.

A Capella Choir Sings

Dr. Edward T. Waring, pastor of Epworth church, gave the invocation, after which the high school a capella choir sang "Incline Thine Ear to me," by Novello, under the direction of L. G. Jones, music supervisor. Rev. Carl V. Roop of the First United Brethren church, father of Carl V. Roop Jr., who is a member of the graduating class, read selected passages of scripture, after which Rev. Harry G. Deeds of the Greenwood Evangelical church offered the pastoral prayer. A hymn, "Go Not Far From Me, O God," by Zingarelli, sung by the school choir preceded the sermon.

In opening, Rev. Olewiler spoke as representative of the ministers and churches of the city in congratulating the class of '37, saying, "It is more than a perfunctory service. It symbolizes a great fact: You begin your commencement by entering into a service of prayer and communion with God, which is as it should be."

The speaker termed the Bible the greatest literature in the world because it is the voice of God, because it deals with the greatest problems of the human soul and the greatest facts of life, because it is the answer to the eternal question, "What is the meaning of all this."

No Answer But Bible

Outside the Bible there is no answer to the question of life after death, he said. "If you haven't thought of it already, you will later and the cry will be, 'Who shall deliver me from the body of death?'"

"The greatest longing of man is the religious life, whether he realizes it or not," Rev. Olewiler said. "The miracle is," he said, "that when man accepts Jesus Christ as his personal savior a peace enters the soul."

Prefacing his statement that the Bible is the voice of God, Rev. Olewiler dwelt on the voice of history in particular among the "noise of machinery, the pleadings of a mother, harsh, kind, critical, bold, timid", voices which are "all audible perhaps within a day."

"We are surrounded by a legion of voices making an indelible impression on our mind," he said. "I have only one in mind tonight," he continued, "the voice of literature. I am not particularly interested in the fine distinction between the artistic form or emotional appeal into which literature is divided. History has something to say, also poetry; science has much, in like manner religion. Let us think tonight of the whole body of writings as a voice."

Voice Is Preserved

"The voice of outstanding men and events is preserved in literature," he went on to say. "The past is vitally alive as long as we have literature. Even though dead, literature will not let the voices of men and nations die."

He spoke of the colonial period of literature in which the thoughts of forefathers, their social, religious and economic aspirations and hardships are expressed and went on to say that in the period from 1815 to 1861 "the greatest poets and writers produced the spirit of American idealism."

"America would do well today to stop and listen to the voice of literature as it was produced between 1815 and 1851," he said.

"These men should have a right to speak, though dead. They have a worthwhile heritage to bequeath," he averred as he mentioned the "upheaval and revolution" of this day and age.

Following the sermon the congregation sang "Faith of Our Fathers" and Rev. Oscar V. Latta of the Oakland Evangelical church pronounced the benediction. The congregation remained seated while the seniors left the church, marching to the organ music of "Allegro Moderatto," by Lefebur-Wely, played by Miss Lawrence.

Baskets of iris, peonies and bridal wreath decorated the platform, placed there by the National Honor society chapter of the school which is in charge of decorations for the various commencement activities.

Mary K. Smith was chairman of the committees to decorate the church. Margaret Young has been named chairman of the class day committee on decorations and Mary Ernestine Smith has been named chairman of the committee for commencement night. Miss Isabel Freer is the faculty chairman.

ANTI-SALOON MEN IN CHURCHES HERE

Dr. S. P. McNaught, state superintendent of the Ohio Anti-Saloon league, Rev. H. B. Pilchard, a field representative of the league and Harvey O. Yoder of Cleveland, a member of the executive committee were in Marion for services at four churches.

Dr. McNaught took part in a temperance play, "Indicted for Murder in the First Degree," which was presented to a large congregation at night at Wesley M. E. church.

Temperance addresses were given by Rev. Pilchard Sunday morning at Epworth M. E. church and at night at Calvary Evangelical church, and by Mr. Yoder on Sunday morning at the Greenwood Evangelical church.

There were more large contributions this year than for several years and practically everyone approached to purchase a flower bought one, the workers reported.

The sell out was general in the vicinity of Marion, it was reported. Pupils In Caps, Gowns

The young men and women of the senior class, the former in gray caps and gowns and the latter in white caps and gowns, preceded in the procession by the pupils of the ninth, tenth and eleventh grades, entered to the strains of a processional by Guilmont, played by Miss Fanny Placentio, and the exercises opened with the singing of "Lord God of Hosts," by the school pupils. For the benediction the pupils sang "Ecce Panis Angelorum," a Portuguese melody, and "Tantum Ergo," both by Verdussen, and Psalm 150, Franch. For the recessional Miss Placento played a composition by Yon.

Peach colored gladiolus filled the gold vases on the main and side altars and were the only decorations in the church.

In his opening address Rev. Summe described the occasion as an outstanding celebration in the history of the school, a day to be cherished by the graduates, their parents and friends. "Today," he said, "as you stand upon the threshold of a newer and wider life we hope you are firmly determined to become noble men and women in whatever walks of life your paths may take you." He counseled the class to carry out with firm determination the principles they had been taught during their school course, and to remember now and forever that the adage of the world, "every man for himself" will not make for happiness.

"Amidst all of the disorder and confusion of this modern day," he said, "the church has made a stand. Like Christ, she goes on doing good. There would be no rulers of socialism or communism had man listened to the warnings and admonitions of the church of God. You would think after all these years of dismal failures, that man would realize that he can not solve any problem that deals with man's higher life without the guidance of Christ.

Following the exercises the class, the young women carrying arm bouquets, formed a receiving line on the lawn at residence of the Sisters of Charity, and received the congratulations of their relatives and friends.

Sunday morning the senior class members were entertained by the junior class at a breakfast at Hotel Harding. Flowers decorated the tables at which covers were laid for 65. WHAT TO DO

Too few people know WHAT TO DO when called upon to make funeral arrangements. The emotional strain resulting from the death of a member of the family, a relative or a friend makes wise and careful decision at that moment extremely difficult.

One way to lighten that burden is to have calmly prepared in advance some of the arrangements—which includes the family burial plot. It is not morbid to do this, merely common sense.

Sure death to ants

Ants are hard to kill but Peterman's Ant Food is made especially to get them and get them fast. Destroys red and black ants, moth-balls young and eggs, too. Sprinkle on windows doors any place where ants enter and keep Safe Effective 4 hours a day 35 cents and for a year druggists.

PETERMAN'S ANT FOOD

One of the most interesting departures in this field of intelligent education is a food-setting forth correct coffee-making rules distributed by a nationally known coffee firm.

Several points mentioned in this folder have been emphasized many times by your home economics lecturer. Do not boil coffee because boiling drives off the flavor and substitutes bitterness for flavor. Use freshly boiled water and how important that is.

The average gas stove will boil one pan of cold water (enough for five cups of coffee) in a cold kettle within eight minutes. It takes only one minute longer to boil one and one-half quarts or even for seven cups of coffee.

Do not boil more water than you need. A milk bottle will measure one quart and it is better than guesswork. Save gas by not starting to boil water until you need it. If you are in a hurry, keep the water boiling while you are dressing.

Accuracy Important

Then comes the critical question of accurate measurements. For both water and coffee must be measured correctly. Whenever some "pupil" in cooking school asks "how do you make a good cup of coffee?" I know she has been guessing at all her measurements. Here are the rules for uniform results in coffee.

Always use an ordinary tablespoon to measure your ground coffee.

Always use one tablespoon of coffee for every cup of boiling water. No more—no less.

For varying degrees of strength vary the size of your tablespoon, as follows:

For average strength, use one rounded tablespoon of universal grind or one almost flat tablespoon of drip grind.

For medium strength use one almost flat tablespoon of universal grind or one very flat tablespoon drip grind.

For great strength use one heaping tablespoon of the all-grind or one rounded tablespoon drip grind.

You must determine the size of the tablespoon that will best suit your individual taste. A tablespoon is the simplest and most convenient coffee measure in every kitchen.

Use Same Cup

For measuring water use the same cup in which you serve coffee. It probably is made of china and the coffee never goes as high as the handle of an aluminum measuring cup.

No special instructions are required when making six cups of coffee in a six-cup coffee maker. Simply, drop the six tablespoons of coffee in the upper section of the pot, and slowly pour the six measured cups of boiling water. The coffee maker may stand over a dim gas flame until the water has dripped through.

Don't wait for the last few drops. They never are as good as the first ones but remove the upper section containing the grounds. Then be sure to stir before serving if you would have uniform coffee.

Keep the coffee hot over a tiny gas flame. If you let it cool off you will spoil the flavor and if you attempt to reheat it you will only make it worse.

"Drip" grind coffee actually yields greater strength than a universal (or percola or all-) grind but water will take longer to drip through.

It is advisable to use a smaller percolator or drip coffee pot for two or three cups of coffee. For the smaller quantity measure two tablespoons of coffee then pour one cup of boiling water slowly over the coffee. Take about ten seconds to empty the cup. Then wait one full minute before you trickle in the second cup slowly.

This interval of one minute between the two cups of water will give the boiling water a chance to extract all the flavor from the small quantity of coffee you are using. The entire operation will not take more than one and one-half minutes.

If you want to be certain of being a first rate cook don't make coffee by guesswork. It can be done.

In Ohio History

(From the J. H. Galbraith collection of Ohio histories written for The Associated Press.)

THE SULTANA DISASTER

On April 27, 1865, less than two weeks after the death of President Lincoln and while Ohio was still officially in mourning for the assassinated President, the state was again cast into a period of gloom by the news of the disaster to the river steamer Sultana near Memphis causing the death of about 500 Ohio soldiers.

The Civil war was nearly over and the war department was sending large groups of soldiers to their homes. The Sultana was in use as a river transport in that work and had just let the wharf at Memphis with 2,100 soldiers on board when the boilers exploded.

The vessel was completely wrecked. Many soldiers were killed outright in the explosion and others were thrown into the river and drowned. In all 1,101 lives were lost.

Murder mysteries are solved by a new game. Any pieces of are moved about a board that shows the floor plan of a house.

Strawberries Mean Treats Stored in Kitchen Jam Pots

MARCHING TO THE KETTLE

This old favorite, the strawberry makes jelly that is just as good as the more familiar jam. Fully ripened berries are used and mixed with sugar and fruit pectin.

By MRS. ALEXANDER GEORGE
Associated Press Writer

Remember the thrill of going into one grandmother's big jam closet—and being allowed to choose your favorite jelly from one of the dark shelves?

Recipes for old-fashioned strawberry preserves as well as for other jams, butters and jellies will recall memories of those childhood quests.

Even if there's only a spare shelf in your kitchen cupboard it ought to be filled with jars and glasses for very "special" occasions.

Here are several recipes for preserving spring fruits that are general favorites.

Strawberry Sunshine
(Cherries or Raspberries May Be Substituted)

6 pounds berries
6 pounds granulated sugar

Select ripe perfect berries. Wash well, drain and remove hulls. Add the sugar mixing with a fork. Let stand for one hour to allow the juice to be drawn out slowly, bring to the boiling point and let simmer 10 minutes. Do not stir since the berries should be kept as whole as possible. Pour to the thickness of one inch in shallow platters and place on a flat surface in the sun. Cover with glass. Allow to stand in the hot sun for three or four days or until the berries are very plump and the juice syrupy. (Bring in at night.) Stir several times each day.

Berries prepared in this manner may be used as preserves and also for topping ice creams or other desserts.

Spiced Cherries
(Delicious with Meats)

Six pounds seeded red cherries, 6 cups granulated sugar, 2 cups vinegar, 1 cup water, ¼ cup bark cinnamon, 12 whole cloves.

Loosely tie spices in a white muslin bag. Let simmer 10 minutes. Add cherries, cover and boil gently for 15 minutes. Pour into a stone jar. When cool cover with a plate and store in a cool dry place.

Black Currant and Rhubarb Jam

Three pounds black currants, 1½ pounds rhubarb, 4 pounds granulated sugar.

Wash and stem the currants. Peel and dice the rhubarb. Mix and let simmer 20 minutes in a covered pan. Add sugar and boil gently stirring frequently until the jam is thick. (About 25 minutes of cooking will be required.)

Blackberry Jam
(An Old Fashioned Favorite)

Six pounds berries, 4½ pounds (8 cups) granulated sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons lemon juice (½ cup).

Wash and carefully look over berries. Add rest of the ingredients and let stand one hour to draw out the juice. Allow to simmer until the jam thickens (about 20 minutes). Stir frequently.

Strawberry Jelly
(Makes 12 Six-Ounce Glasses)

Five cups (2½ pounds) strawberry juice, 7 cups (three pounds) granulated sugar, 2 boxes powdered fruit pectin.

To prepare juice crush thoroughly or grind about 3½ quarts fully ripe berries. Place fruit in jelly cloth or bag, and squeeze out juice. (If there is a slight shortage of juice add a small amount of water to pulp in jelly cloth and squeeze again.)

Measure sugar into dry dish and set aside until needed. Measure juice into a 5 to 6-quart sauce pan and place over very hot fire. Add powdered fruit pectin. Mix well and continue stirring until mixture comes to a hard boil. At once pour in sugar stirring constantly. Continue stirring. Bring to full boiling point. Boil hard half a minute. Remove from fire. Skim. Pour quickly. Paraffin hot jelly at once.

RECIPE REQUESTS ANSWERED HERE

CHOCOLATE COOKIES

The recipe for these cookies won a prize and they will prove a prize to have on hand since the honey keeps them moist and fresh.

One cup honey or substitute, one cup shortening, two cups oatmeal, two squares bitter chocolate, one teaspoon vanilla, two eggs, two cups flour, three-fourths teaspoon soda, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one teaspoon cinnamon, one-fourth cup sour milk, one cup chopped nut meats.

Cream honey and shortening. Add oatmeal, chocolate and vanilla. Add beaten eggs. Sift together dry ingredients. Add alternately with milk. Add nuts and drop on greased cookie sheet. Bake for fifteen minutes at 350 degrees F. This yields seven dozen.

SAUERKRAUT ROLL

Lovers of sauerkraut may like to try this novel recipe. Incidentally the lowly kraut is a real health food for it is rich in lime, potash and phosphorus, also in iron and in calcium, the bone-building substance.

Take two or three pounds of round steak cut three-fourths of an inch thick. Sprinkle salt and pepper over it. Cover with thin slices of bacon. Place as much kraut on the meat as possible and roll up and fasten with skewers. Put in a covered roasting pan with a pint of water and bake one hour in a moderate oven.

Then thicken the liquid with flour. Garnish with lemon slices.

Graham Cracker Ice Cream

One pint single cream not whipped, one-half cup sifted sugar, one-half teaspoon each of vanilla and almond extract, and one cup graham cracker crumbs.

Mix in order given. Pour in tray of automatic refrigerator and allow at least four hours for freezing. Serves six and is a simple yet delicious hurry-up dessert for warm days.

Children's Milk Shake

To one cup whole milk add one-fourth cup of unsweetened canned pineapple juice and one scoop vanilla ice cream. Have milk and juice thoroughly chilled.

Shake vigorously or blend with electric mixer. If the children are having a little tea-party serve cookies with this drink. And don't forget straws!

Macaroni Toppers

Mix one-half cup cooked macaroni with one-half cup grated cheese, two-thirds cup stewed or fresh tomatoes, one-half cup soft bread crumbs, salt, pepper, paprika and one-fourth teaspoon Worcestershire or other sauce.

Pack into green peppers from which fibers and seeds have been removed. Cover with one can hot tomato soup, diluted with an equal amount of hot water and bake thirty to forty minutes at 350 degrees F.

With the side orders of a light salad and pudding this will provide a complete meal, particularly if you bake a few quick biscuits while this dish is in the oven.

Quick Croquettes

A timely variation from roast beef and lamb is a tender roast of veal. And nothing makes more delicious croquettes about the middle of the week when the Sunday roast is a sorry wreck. Left-over peas go into this dish too, so it is a real economy meal.

One cup cooked green peas, one and three-fourths cups cooked veal ground, one-half teaspoon salt, one-eighth teaspoon pepper, two teaspoons grated onion, one-half cup bread crumbs, one egg, two tablespoons cold water, fat for deep frying.

Mash cooked peas. Add veal, salt, pepper and onion and mix well. Place in refrigerator and chill. (This may be done early in the day.) When ready for use shape into croquettes and roll in bread crumbs or fine cracker meal. Combine egg and cold water and beat slightly. Dip croquettes in egg mixture then roll again in bread crumbs. Drop in deep pure vegetable fat heated to 385 degrees F. and fry until golden brown.

Tomato sauce is a good partner for these croquettes. A few drops of worcestershire sauce may be added to mixture.

Indians Defeat Tigers; Dodgers End Hubbell's Streak

Youthful Hoosier Driver Wins Indianapolis Race and $30,000

By The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind June 1— Checks totalling more than $30,000 were held today for Wilbur Shaw a dapper young Hoosier who gambled on his tires and gasoline supply and won a 500-mile Indianapolis motor speedway race after seven attempts

Shaw along with other drivers in yesterday's race—the fastest, the closest and the hottest in history—will attend the annual dinner for pilots tonight to get the money he and they won

For Shaw there will be a $20,000 check for winning the race He will get others amounting to $5,500 for lap prize money and those awarded by automobile accessory and gasoline companies

Shaw a native of Indianapolis roared to victory in a car he designed built and owns with Ralph Hepburn the Los Angeles veteran only two seconds behind him Hepburn came just that close to pulling an end to the old speedway jinx that A car never wins two races He was driving the same job that Louis Meyer did one to victory last year

The speed of 113.580 miles an hour was the fastest ever made in a 500-mile race In fact the first four finishers all broke the previous speed record of 109.069 miles an hour set last year by Meyer

The last 50 miles of the race were as thrilling as anyone of the 100,000 spectators could want to see At 400 miles Shaw seized the lead from Bob Swanson of Los Angeles who had been driving for Hepburn Ralph got back in his own car and took out after the fast flying Indianapolis boy

At that time he was more than 2 laps back but he knew he was through with pit stops With Shaw it was a question of whether the gas supply and tires would last Gradually Hepburn pulled up When Shaw went into his next to last lap he was 28 seconds ahead of Hepburn At the start of the last lap he was only 11 seconds out in front and at the finish he was slightly more than two seconds to the good

NEW YORK June 1 — Yep Brooklyn is still in the league Carl Hubbell adds and how New York fans are disappointed that Bob Pastor didn't stop Bob Nestell who has had 12 pro fights

The crowd at the Polo Grounds yesterday howled when Burleigh Grimes sent in Van Mungo to protect a five run lead Burleigh aimed to win that one

Jimmy J Braddock and Max Schmeling are advertised to fight 15 rounds or less for the heavyweight title about 15 rounds less would be what the doctor ordered since he swore off smoking for a month Jimmy Dykes manager of the White Sox has been presented more than 300 cigars Jimmy's time is up June 15 and he hopes the stogies won't be too dry to operate on This corner will risk a few bucks that Eddie Mayo Jimmy will be the next light weight champion

There is nothing quite like the rivalry between the Giants and the Dodgers They stopped selling bleacher seats for yesterday's double header at 11 a m some guys particularly those who had their sweeties along cheerfully paid $10 for a pair of $1.10 seats

Not a few a lots forked out $15 for three of same after 12:30 p m the cops wouldn't let you out of the subway unless you could show a reserved seat ticket They'd say keep riding brother and push you right back into those cars

TRIBE ADVANCES TO SECOND PLACE AT EXPENSE OF DETROIT

Cincinnati Splits Pair With Pirates King Carl's Record Ends at 24 Games

BY SID FEDER
Associated Press Writer

It just had to be the Dodgers

It was in the cards that the daffiness boys from Brooklyn the fine old jinx that has hoodooed the Giants more times than Bill Terry cares to remember—should be the club to catch up with Carl Hubbell's winning streak

Even though the Hub's 24 game string longest in all baseball history over a two-season stretch ended there's no one who can say old aquaman's isn't just as good a loser as he is a winner

Fine after the Dodgers belted him out in 3½ innings yesterday and went on to an 18-hit 10-3 win in the opening game of the holiday double bill Hubbell showed definitely that he can take it

It had to come he said in the clubhouse after the long walk from the mound in front of the 60,000 crowd that jammed the Polo Grounds

It was great while it lasted but no one can go on winning forever I had a lot of luck It just ran out on me There was even a chuckle in his voice Now that the heats off maybe I can do a little real pitching

The rest of the Memorial day program made little difference to the diamond world The baseball faithful didn't care so much that the Giants came back to the second game 5-4 or that the Cleveland Indians dished the Tigers twice or that the Cubs clouted a double bill from the Cardinals clouted Dizzy Dean for 15 hits in the opener

It was logical that the lowly Dodgers took the villain role They alone have beaten Hubbell more times than he has topped them throughout his career

For the rest of the program the double whipping the Indians handed the Tigers 7-1 and 8-5 (the latter going 11 innings) was outstanding The Indians took second place in the American League dropping the Tigers to 3rd

Pittsburgh's Pirates maintained a 1½ game National League lead by splitting with Cincinnati taking the nightcap 7-5 after dropping the opener 9-7 The American League pace setters the Yanks came from behind to win the first game from the Red Sox 4-3 and then fell 8-2 in the second

Bill Lee and Clay Bryant each pitched six hitters as the Cubs downed the Cards 4-2 and 6-3 The Phillies knocked off the Boston Bees 6-3 and 8-5 Washington walloped the sinking Athletics 6-3 and 6-1 and the Chicago White Sox did the same to the St Louis Browns 5-2 and 10-5

The Roosevelt Speedway races July 4 Boston fans proved themselves first flight sports by giving Billy Holley (who beaned Mickey Cochrane) that fine ovation when he took the hill for the Yankees yesterday

ARM STILL SORE, FELLER TO GET COMPLETE REST

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND June 1 — Baseball's storybook kid Bob Feller bothered by a sore arm and public attention was on the shelf today for another indefinite period

The 18-year-old Cleveland pitcher who skyrocketed to fame by the strikeout route left the city on a leave of absence expected to last from two weeks to a month

Feller has pitched to only one batter since he injured his "million dollar arm" in his 1937 league debut here April 24—five and one half weeks ago

C C Slapnicka Indians vice president issued a formal announcement saying "after several attempts at pitching during batting practice and after several short periods of rest Bob still feels the soreness in his forearm and it has been decided that a complete rest will be beneficial as well as necessary"

Feller will return to his Iowa home to wait until his arm feels ready for further duty Slapnicka said

I haven't heard anything about it" said Mrs Will Feller the strikeout king's mother The last letter I got from Bob was Thursday but he didn't mention leaving Cleveland He said he was feeling great

Slapnicka said Feller had become nervous and irritable under the strain of public attention and that complete freedom from baseball contacts and even from baseball conversation was indicated

The Stars Say—

For Wednesday, June 2

A DAY OF conflicting planetary operations may have startling and sudden denouements. Be alert to element of intrigue and ability to combat with wisdom and decision. Peculiar circumstances may urge to change, and this would be beneficial if managed properly. Writings or documents have important bearing on the affairs, but beware of treachery, schemes and craft. In employment, be cautious.

Those whose birthday it is may find themselves in a year of unusual or peculiar conditions calling for sagacity, as well as shrewd insight and vigilance against intrigue, duplicity and craft. A sudden bit of news may influence change of travel, and this would be to the advantage if managed wisely. Papers and business loom large and call for very careful consideration. Be cautious in employment.

A child born on this day may have a temperamental nature, and may be sensitive, emotional and imaginative, with literary talent or originality, but it may have difficulty in employment. It may be shrewd, crafty and secretive, fond of change and adventure.
